ENTHUSIASAM AROUSED OVER BOARD OF TRADE

President Croxall Made a Speech Which Banished Indifference.

BRUSH FACTORY PROJECT

THE GLASS FACTORY MATTER UP

And a Disposition to Encourage It Manifested—A $250,000 Enterprise Hinted At—Committee Appointed to Canvass for Members.

Prompted by the apparent indifference on the part of East Liverpool's citizens by the small attendance at the meeting of the board of trade last night, President Croxall made a speech, which, though of an impromptu nature, was effectually to the point and characterized with sound logic from beginning to end. Mr. Croxall did not begin his speech until the meeting was almost half over, but in the 15 minutes which he devoted to his remarks he accomplished more in the way of arousing enthusiasm than has been done otherwise in all the time since the board was first organized.

After repeated efforts to induce expressions from the different persons present as to what action to take on the different matters before the board, Mr. Croxall, who became rather provoked at his poor success in inducing the spectators to voice their sentiments, arose from his seat. "Gentlemen," he began, "it certainly appears to me that enthusiasm at this meeting is too much lacking. It is discouraging to begin when the attendance is so small, but those of us here should not sit idle and wait on each other to do the talking." The speaker then went on to state that he was unable to explain why it was that the citizens evinced such marked indifference in the matter of encouraging the board of trade in the work of furthering the interests of the city. He said that when he became identified with the board he did so with the positive belief that the citizens in general would realize the importance of such an organization and do their utmost to urge the matter along.

"However," continued Mr. Croxall, "instead of the great majority of our people aiding in the movement they have paid no attention whatever to the appeals which have been made to them for assistance, and have not even taken enough interest to attend our meetings. What is the use of a few of us trying to work for the good of the city when hundreds, even thousands, of our neighbors sit idly by and wait for us to do all the work when they would receive an equal benefit with us?" The speaker then stated that he had met with different persons in the city who thought East Liverpool did not need a board of trade, but none could give any reason for making the statement.

"East Liverpool does need a board of trade," said Mr. Croxall, "and there is no reason why we should not have one. But," he added, "if we can't arouse enough enthusiasm to induce a larger attendance at our meetings than is here tonight we had better quit at once." The speaker thanked those in attendance for the interest they had manifested, and concluded his speech by saying that if the proper spirit was shown by the citizens who should feel interested a board of trade could be made to flourish.

The address of Mr. Croxall had the desired effect, and in a very few moments the meeting had been transformed from a tiresome, sleepy session to one of business and animation.

When the meeting was called or order there were about 20 persons present, mostly business and professional men. While the attendance was painfully small those who were present were there to take an active part and all did so. President Croxall announced the Pittsburg gentlemen who had promised to be present at the meeting were ready to submit a proposition to the board. He then introduced W. S. Walker and Charles T. Moore, representing the Walker Brush Manufacturing company of Pittsburg. At a request from the president Mr. Moore addressed the meeting.

He stated that because of the expensive rent and for other reasons it was the desire of the company he represented to move away from Pittsburg. He stated that the company was incorporated with a capital of $50,000. Patents were held on the different kinds of brushes which they made, and that at present the plant employed about 28 persons. Mr. Moore stated that a patent had recently been received on a new kind of brush, and once the factory was located away from Pittsburg it would be increased to double its present capacity. He said if the proper inducements were given the company would move to East Liverpool as soon as a building could be erected.

Mr. Walker then spoke. He said that a building 40x200 feet would be large enough to hold all necessary machinery. During a visit recently made to this city he had been shown the Chambers building in the East End, which, he said, would answer his purpose. He asked that $5,000 worth of stock be subscribed, the same to be used in the purchase of the building.

In reply to questions asked by the different ones present, Mr. Walker stated that he could guarantee a profit of 15 per cent on the total investment. Skilled labor was principally employed, the average salary of each of the mechanics being $21 per week and that the present payroll amounted to about $350 to $400. He said that most of the men employed at present would come here. Mr. Walker said that while the majority of his employes were men, he had four girls and a few boys at work also.

At the conclusion of Mr. Walker's remarks, President Croxall asked for expressions from the spectators. Dr. Calhoun said he considered the proposition a good one and thought the necessary $5,000 could be easily raised. He stated that he had been talking with a building and loan company, and that he had been informed that the Chambers property in the East End could be bought for the above amount and that the company would take stock.

C. T. Hard took the floor and stated that he thought a committee should be appointed to inspect the factory before anything was done toward raising the money for the purchase of a building. Secretary Travis thought Mr. Hard's idea a good one, and made a motion, which carried, that a committee of three be appointed to make the desired inspection.

The president named three of the parties present, among them being Joseph Betz, who took the floor and argued that he thought it should be the duty of the board of directors to make the inspection. Although there was considerable objection made at first to Mr. Betz's suggestion it was finally decided to appoint a committee from the board to do the work. The president then named John W. Moore, Thompson Andrews and J. W. Gipner. The committee was instructed to make the inspection without delay and report at the next meeting.

President Croxall stated that N. G. Macrum, who had been elected a member of the board of directors, had declined to serve. On motion it was left for the president to appoint another man to fill the vacancy. Mr. Croxall will name Mr. Macrum's successor at the next meeting.

Secretary Travis asked for a report from the committee appointed to draw up the constitution and by-laws. Moore stated that he had done the work, but that the other members of the committee had not yet passed on the same. He read the rules as he had drawn them up.

Louis Steinfeld asked what had been done with the glass house proposition. He stated that he was inclined to believe it would be a far better industry for the city than the contemplated brush factory, and said he was not only willing to take stock, but would assist in any way possible to dispose of stock to others. Mr. Travis stated that he had met with "rough sledding" in his efforts to get people interested, and said that an entire day which he had devoted to hard work endeavoring to sell stock was productive of nothing.

Several others were inclined to agree with Mr. Steinfeld that a glass house would be a good thing for East Liverpool, and all evidenced an eagerness to boom the project. Mr. Calhoun thought the committee which had been appointed to solicit subscriptions should be increased. Various other views were expressed with the result that a motion prevailed empowering the committee with authority to ask for any assistance they de-

CHESTER MILL TO BE STARTED

A Well Defined Rumor That the Tin Plate Trust Will Run It.

MR. BANFIELD INTERVIEWED

Refuses to Discuss Plans, But Admits That Dismantling Has Been Stopped And States That No Changes Are to Be Made at Present

Irondale, June 7.—(Special.)—William Banfield, prominently identified with the steel trust, was in Irondale today making an inspection of the rolling mill. When questioned concerning the report that he had resigned from the trust, Mr. Banfield stated emphatically that there was absolutely no truth in the rumor.

Concerning the Chester mill he said that the work of dismantling the plant had been discontinued and that no further changes would be made at present.

Regarding the prospect of the mill being put into operation Mr. Banfield refused to say. He would neither deny nor confirm the report that the plant is to start. He left here on the noon train for the east.

There is a well defined rumor, apparently based on the best of authority, that the American Tin Plate company, of which Mr. Banfield is district manager, is to take charge of the mill and run it. From what can he learned of the intentions of the officials, the Chester mill will soon be running, and employing a large number of men. The mill will be utilized to make black sheets for use in tin plate mills.

Given By the Boys of the High School at Rock Springs.

DISTURBERS WERE CALLED

It Had Been Announced That None But Holders of Tickets Would Be Admitted, But They Insisted Upon Remaining.

The dance given at Rock Springs last evening by the high school boys was one of the most enjoyable ever held at the park. Although rain continued to fall throughout the entire evening there were present nearly 200 guests.

Some little annoyance was occasioned early in the evening by a party of young people who did not hold invitations. The outsiders insisted upon remaining, but the management informed them they would not be permitted to stay, and they adjourned to the gallery. Whan the first dance was started the spectators continued their annoyance. Manager Maxwell promptly told the disturbers they must behave or leave the grounds. The warning was sufficient, and they departed soon afterward.

The high school boys and ther friends enjoyed themselves until a late hour, and considering that this, in the cases of not a few members of the class, was their maiden effort as hosts, the boys did themselves proud.

HER HOUSE MAY FALL AND SHE WANTS $3,000

Mrs. Susan Marshall's Novel Suit Against Thomas Walklet.

EAST LIVERPOOL IS SUED

By George Shaw Who Asks $2,500 For Personal Injuries Received.

SENSATIONAL DIVORCE SUIT

Filed By a Salem Woman—Says Her Husband Whipped Her And Smashed Her False Teeth—Defendant Wins in Corns-Burton Case.

Lisbon, June 7. — (Special.)—Mrs. Susan Marshall, of East Liverpool, who owns property on Third street, has brought action for $3,000 damages against Thomas Walklet. Mrs. Marshall's lot is known as No. 168. She accuses the defendant, who owns property adjoining, of having dug the earth from the side of her foundation well to a depth below the bottom of the wall, leaving it exposed and without support, except the ground under it. She claims her house has been deprived of its proper support and is liable to collapse at any moment. J. H. Brookes is her attorney.

George Shaw has brought action against the city of East Liverpool for $2,500 damages by reason of injuries sustained on April 1. Shaw says that he was walking along Sixth street when he stumbled over a wooden post, which extended three inches above the middle of the sidewalk and was firmly imbedded in the ground. It had been for several months a menace to all persons walking along the sidewalk. He claims the city neglected to move it or to guard it. When he tripped over it and fell he broke his left arm and was otherwise injured. He claims that he has not been able to perform any work since the accident, and that his injuries are permanent. Attorneys Brookes and Thompson filed the action.

Mrs. Mary E. Sheen, of Salem, wants to be divorced from James A. Sheen. She asks the court to give her the custody of her three minor children and to require the defendant to provide for their education. She was married in Salem in June, 1887. For three years she says her husband has neglected her and the children, failing to provide for them. A week ago, the wife says, Sheen struck and beat her, cutting and destroying her wearing apparel and forcing her false teeth from her mouth and crushing them with his heel. Mrs. Sheen says her husband is in the habit of beating her, and cursing and swearing at her. He is a telephone lineman and earns good wages. J. E. Scott filed the action.

Mrs. Lizzie Belle Wallace, of Salem, has been granted a divorce from Charles R. Wallace, on grounds of habitual drunkenness and gross neglect. The court ordered that Wallace refrain from interfering in any way with the children. The couple were married in 1885.

The case of Albert W. Corns against William T. Burton, of East Liverpool, went to the jury this morning. In a short time a verdict was returned in favor of the defendant.

Roy Wilson, a Wellsville boy, was arraigned before Judge Boone today, charged with stealing lead pipe. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to jail for 20 days and to pay the costs.

George Wasson and Ed Jackson, who were arrested yesterday afternoon for fighting, pleaded guilty before the mayor last evening and were each fined $2 and costs. John Dimmerling, employed at the East Liverpool pottery, who was also connected with the fight, claims that Wasson and Jackson attacked him, and that he acted in self-defense. He has not yet had his hearing.

There were no arrests last night.

He claims the hole was without proper protection and as a result of the accident, a mare, valued at $250, was killed, and the other horse so injured as to be unfit to work for over three weeks. The harness was also broken, causing $25 loss. By reason of being thrown out of work for several weeks Chamberlain asks $20 damages. He also wants to be paid $10 for burying the horse that was killed. In all he asks damages in the sum of $326.

FIGHTERS FINED

George Wasson And Ed Jackson Contribute $6.60 to the City's Coffers.

Benjamin Boody, who was arrested a few days since in company with Lou Hutton, the shanty boat owner, charged with keeping a disorderly house, called at the mayor's office this morning and secured the money which Mayor Davidson had been holding. Boody left for Coraopolis.

George Wasson and Ed Jackson, who were arrested yesterday afternoon for fighting, pleaded guilty before the mayor last evening and were each fined $2 and costs. John Dimmerling, employed at the East Liverpool pottery, who was also connected with the fight, claims that Wasson and Jackson attacked him, and that he acted in self-defense. He has not yet had his hearing.

There were no arrests last night.

EAST END

AN AWAKING

Smith's Ferry Has a Boom As the Trolley Road Approaches the Town.

Sleepy Smith's Ferry is waking up and so is her neighbor, Georgetown. In the latter village the boom is caused by the operations of the Beaver Coal company, while at Smith's Ferry the boom is altogether due to the fact that she is to become a suburb of East Liverpool. When the street car line is completed to Beaver Creek, Smith's Ferry will be almost as near to the city proper as Klondike and the East End are at present and the car fare will be just the same.

Consequently there is already a good demand for houses in Smith's Ferry and the prices asked have increased about 25 per cent, but are still about one-third lower than in the East End.

UNDER THE ENGINE

Valuable Dog Belonging to William Heckathorn Was Killed.

A valuable dog owned by William Heckathorn was killed by the shipping engine yesterday afternoon at the crossing in the East End. The engine was running at a high rate of speed and the dog ran at it and jumped at Roy Colclough, who was standing on the step.

Colclough managed to get out of the way and the dog fell under the engine and was killed.

Knife Fell on His Foot.

Samuel, the 10-year-old son of James Eardley, of Klondike, met with a slight accident yesterday that will confine him to the house for a few days. He knocked a large butcher knife off the table, which fell edge downward across his big toe, cutting it to the bone. A physician was summoned to dress the wound.

Off for Buffalo.

Elmer Stevenson is organizing an excursion party to visit the Pan-American exposition. The party will consist of about 15 men, who will start on the trip either June 15 or July 1. They will remain in Buffalo two weeks.

Bird Dog Poisoned.

A valuable bird dog belonging to Jerry Riddle was poisoned last night.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

Frank Chambers spent the day in Pittsburg.

Dr. R. A. Adams is in Pittsburg on business today.

Mrs. Dr. W.E. Mowen is confined to her bed with illness.

John Douglass is moving from East Liverpool to Dixonville.

The motormen will meet the East End pottery boys on the diamond at Columbian park this afternoon.

The brick work on the A. C. M. tenement building has been completed and the roof is being put on today.

Mrs. William Twiford and children left this morning for a visit to their old home in Cabell county, W. Va.

Richard Chambers will leave this evening on an extended trip to the south. He will meet his brother, Emmet, at Pittsburg and they will leave that city tomorrow morning en route to Raleigh, N. C. They will visit several other cities in North Carolina and will proceed by way of Charleston through South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. They will also visit New Orleans, La., and San Antonio, Tex., returning by way of St. Louis. Their itinerary will cover about a month's time.

ARSON THREATENED

BY AN EAST LIVERPOOL COUPLE AT ALLIANCE.

They Had a Quart of Whisky and Were Very Drunk—Sent to the Works.

According to a report in the Alliance Review an East Liverpool couple have been misbehaving themselves in that city. There is no such name as that given in the item known in this city, but fictitious names may have been given. Here is the story:

Henry and Mary Sproze, an ill-favored pair hailing from East Liverpool, were arrested by Officers Oswalt and Alexander at about 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. They had been loitering about the outskirts of the city all afternoon, and along about 5 o'clock word was sent to police headquarters asking that officers be sent out to the Rockhill road to arrest them. They had a quart of whisky and were very drunk. They had gone into McGrath's barn to sleep off their jags, but were driven out. They then threatened to burn the building. As long as they were on the far side of the road the police could not arrest them, and they did not cross over into town until about 6 o'clock, when the police were at once sent for.

When the officers arrived they found the pair lying in the bushes. The woman refused to go a step and lay down in the road. There are no call boxes out there, so a telephone message for the wagon was sent from Transue & Williams' shops.

Perry Oswalt took the bottle of whisky from the pair, and the woman furnished much amousement for the people along Main street, by loving overtures toward Perry in trying to get another drink from the bottle. She would upbraid him awhile, then she would try to get her arms around his neck and coax him, much to his disgust.

When the couple appeared before the mayor the woman asserted that yesterday was the first time she ever tasted liquor in her life, which statement so overcame his honor that he had to be fanned. His emotions did not so far overcome him as to prevent him saying $10 and costs, to stand committed to the workhouse until paid. They had not a cent and were taken over on No. 9 by Chief Howell.

An interesting program was presented in the evening.

MOST COSTLY OF DRUGS.

Some Sell at Retail For More Than Their Weight In Gold.

"The price of many drugs used in medicine is astonishing to those who are not acquainted with the subject" remarked a druggist. "There are several that are worth their weight in gold (about $20 an ounce), while $2, $3 or $5 an ounce are quite common prices in pharmacy. I filled a prescription the other day that cost $25. But there is one drug that I can recall which is worth much more than its weight in gold. That is pseudo physostigmine. I don't think that it has a popular name. It is too rich for that. In the pharmacists' list it is quoted at $1 a grain, or $437.50 an ounce. The seed from which the drug is made grows in India and Brazil, as well as in parts of South Africa. This seed, tradition says, was once used by native chiefs as an ordeal. The ordeal generally resulted in the death of the man upon whom it was tried and so was considered as a great truth finder. The prepared drug is sometimes used now in prescriptions for the treatment of heart disease.

"Another drug which takes the palm for costliness is, curiously enough, the one which is perhaps the most widely known by name of them all to the general public—namely, musk. Its retail price at the present moment is about $50 an ounce, $600 a pound apothecary, or 2½ times the value of pure gold, 24 carats fine. It is obtained from the musk deer, a very rare animal, and is contained in a follicle, of which there is only one in each animal, so that an ounce of the drug represents approximately one of these precious animals. As it is largely used for scent, the demand constantly exceeds the supply, and the price has been steadily advancing. There is no reason why it should not go to $250 or $500 an ounce during the next few years, as the musk deer is gradually vanishing from the face of the earth."—Kansas City Journal.

BEWARE OF THE STRAP.

A Possible Source of Infection to Those Who Ride in Street Cars.

The connection between the microbe and the street car strap has frequently been discussed and at least one recent instance has proved somewhat distressingly that danger is likely to lurk in the piece of leather which helps to support so many women during the rush hours of the day. It was to protect a fresh pair of white gloves that a New York woman, compelled to stand, held her handkerchief inside the strap while going to the theater. On her way home she was again compelled to stand, and once more the handkerchief came between her glove and the leather.

Whether it was after that or during the evening at the theater that she once thoughtlessly put the handkerchief to her face is a detail that she does not recall, but two days afterward a pain on her lip became so intolerable that she was compelled to see a doctor, who found her suffering from incipient blood poisoning, which it was already too late for him to prevent. The most that he could do was to watch her carefully through a long attack of illness, which at one time threatened to end fatally.

He attributed this to some poisonous substance which had passed to her handkerchief from the strap, and that was his diagnosis the moment he heard the story of the ride on the cable car. She fortunately recovered, and her physician thinks that the present disfigurement to her face which resulted from the necessity of an operation will not be permanent. The case has convinced this physician, who is a man of considerable experience in surgery, of the dangers that lurk in the street car strap.—New York Sun.

One Improvident Family.

The minister in an adjoining Tennessee town was very much wrought up over the pitiful condition of a parishioner's family. He went to their home and, finding they were almost starving, decided that something should be done for them. He accordingly solicited contributions for their relief. Receiving a liberal response, he promptly turned over the money to the suffering ones, thinking that all would be well.

The first thing they did, however, was to go to the photographer of the town and have a dozen pictures made of each of the five members of the family, exhausting the amount, leaving them in as bad condition as they were before he had given them assistance.—Memphis Scimitar.

Brought Down the House.

On one occasion, when Arthur Roberts, the English actor, was performing the part of Captain Crosstree in the burlesque of "Black Eyed Susan" at Glasgow, he converted an awkward contretemps into a hit. In one of the scenes Crosstree enters supposed to be inebriated and staggers about the stage. In doing so Mr. Roberts accidentally came in contact with the scenery of the inn, bringing the whole set down. The curtain had to be lowered, and the vivacious comedian came to the front and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, you see when we come to Glasgow we always bring down the house."

It was to protect a fresh pair of white gloves that a New York woman, compelled to stand, held her handkerchief inside the strap while going to the theater. On her way home she was again compelled to stand, and once more the handkerchief came between her glove and the leather.

Whether it was after that or during the evening at the theater that she once thoughtlessly put the handkerchief to her face is a detail that she does not recall, but two days afterward a pain on her lip became so intolerable that she was compelled to see a doctor, who found her suffering from incipient blood poisoning, which it was already too late for him to prevent. The most that he could do was to watch her carefully through a long attack of illness, which at one time threatened to end fatally.

He attributed this to some poisonous substance which had passed to her handkerchief from the strap, and that was his diagnosis the moment he heard the story of the ride on the cable car. She fortunately recovered, and her physician thinks that the present disfigurement to her face which resulted from the necessity of an operation will not be permanent. The case has convinced this physician, who is a man of considerable experience in surgery, of the dangers that lurk in the street car strap.—New York Sun.

One Improvident Family.

The minister in an adjoining Tennessee town was very much wrought up over the pitiful condition of a parishioner's family. He went to their home and, finding they were almost starving, decided that something should be done for them. He accordingly solicited contributions for their relief. Receiving a liberal response, he promptly turned over the money to the suffering ones, thinking that all would be well.

The first thing they did, however, was to go to the photographer of the town and have a dozen pictures made of each of the five members of the family, exhausting the amount, leaving them in as bad condition as they were before he had given them assistance.—Memphis Scimitar.

Brought Down the House.

On one occasion, when Arthur Roberts, the English actor, was performing the part of Captain Crosstree in the burlesque of "Black Eyed Susan" at Glasgow, he converted an awkward contretemps into a hit. In one of the scenes Crosstree enters supposed to be inebriated and staggers about the stage. In doing so Mr. Roberts accidentally came in contact with the scenery of the inn, bringing the whole set down. The curtain had to be lowered, and the vivacious comedian came to the front and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, you see when we come to Glasgow we always bring down the house."

FIGHTING BOYS

One Had the Backing of His Mother, and the Battle Was Lively.

The residents of Jethro were treated to an exhibition of youthful slugging that would have done credit to more experienced hands, last evening, when two boys became involved in a quarrel and their mothers interfered. The boys, who are about 10 years of age, had been in the habit of quarreling, but one of them had always left when he got the worst of a round. Last evening his mother saw him running and the other boy after him. She became so angry that she marched her son back to the other boy and told him that if he did not whip his tormentor she would beat him within an inch of his life.

With this incentive and such a pleasant prospect before him her son was enabled to do battle more fiercely than he had ever done in the past, and the result was that after a long and fierce contest he came off victorious. The other boy's mother appeared on the scene about this time and the two engaged in a terrible verbal battle that lasted about an hour and injured nobody.

THE WOOD ADDITION

To be Laid Off in Lots Which Will Be Offered for Sale.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Sherwood Land company it was decided to have the entire Sherwood addition laid off and the lots put on the market within two weeks. It is said that many offers have already been received from parties who desire to locate on the high and dry ground with pure air and good water.

No Pegs.

Beerbohm Tree had a comical experience on his first appearance as the corpulent Falstaff. In the last act he had arranged that Falstaff, disconcerted by gibes and buffets of the fairies in Windsor forest, should make one herculean effort to climb the oak tree. The pegs that were to serve as supports for that tree were always conspicuous by their absence. On the morning before the performance Mr. Tree was told they should positively be fixed on the tree. The morning came, but with it no pegs. Eloquence was stifled; even invective faltered. He pointed to the tree and with the calm of despair blurted out to the defaulter, "No pegs!"

Such an ejaculation, spoken more in sorrow than in anger, would, he hoped, appeal to that last remnant of conscience which even the papier mache bosom of a property man might be supposed to retain. In the evening there was a dress rehearsal, but still no pegs could be seen. Mr. Tree's form quivered—beneath the padding—with pent up emotions, and in a torrent of passion and a voice shaken by righteous wrath he exclaimed:

"Where are those pegs?"

"Pegs—pegs!" exclaimed the property master, with exasperating affability. "Why, guv'nor, what was your words to me this morning? 'No pegs.' And there ain't none!"—London Tit-Bits.

LACROSSE

Lacrosse has never occupied a very prominent niche in the attention of the general public. Indications are, however, that the summer of 1901 is advancing the sport considerably.

Colleges have as a rule been the chief supporters of lacrosse, although many of the big athletic clubs have put out teams.

In the recent intercollegiate championship contest at Hoboken, N. J., the lacrosse team of Stevens institute of Hoboken captured premier honors by defeating Harvard.

Canada is the home of lacrosse. The crack Toronto team now in the United States is superior to any aggregation that we can produce. During the summer a team of Canadian Indian lacrosse players will tour the United States.

Lacrosse, as played by the Canadian Indians, is strenuous in the extreme. Their feats of endurance are nothing short of phenomenal.

Set For the Wrong Time.

He works in a down town office for a gruff old chap who has no love for laggards. He is due at 8 sharp, but as he likes to be out o' nights he never wakes up a moment too soon. He has an alarm clock, which he sets at 7, and this gives him barely time to dress, breakfast and reach the office.

One day last week, the man having forgotten to wind his clock the night before, it didn't go off. So there were explanations to be made about 8:30 a. m. This was the excuse:

"Well, you see, Mr. Gruff, I know how punctual you like all of your men to be, so I have an alarm clock, which I set for 7 in the morning. But, by mistake, I set it for 7 in the evening last night, and of course it didn't go off at 7 in the morning today, as usual. And I overslept myself."

"Ah, you did? Well, I'll excuse you this time. But set it properly after this."

And now the chap is wondering whether or not "the old man" was really fooled or merely wanted to let him down easy. Perhaps he thinks the boss believes he has a 24 hour clock.—Kansas City Journal.

Bull Baiting.

Although bull baiting was a cruel pastime, it was also a fulfilling of the law, for formerly no butcher was allowed to offer for sale the flesh of any bull that had not been baited. The goading of the animal in a fury was supposed to have some influence on the flesh. In a similar belief the flesh of a hunted hare was thought to be superior in flavor to that of one that had been shot, and a present of "a hunted hare" was considered to be a special compliment. In the records of the corporation of Leicester, England, the following order appears: "At a common hall, held on Thursday before St. Simon and St. Jude, 1467, 'no butcher to kill a bull till baited.'" At Winchester it was ordered (thirtieth Henry VIII) "that from hensforth ther shal be no bulstake set before any mayor's dore to bayte any bull, but onlie at the bull-ringe within the saide cytie."

The Perplexed Juror.

A man was being tried in New South Wales for stealing a watch. The evidence was conflicting, and the jury made up their minds to retire, but before they left the hall the judge remarked that if there were any points on which they required information he would be pleased to assist them. Eleven of the jurymen had left the box, but the twelfth remained standing, with his eyes fixed downward, as if absorbed in thought.

"Well, sir," said the judge, "is there any question you would like to ask me before you retire?"

"I would like to know, my lord," came the reply, "if you could tell us whether the prisoner stole the watch."

There are so many poor grammarians that we wonder grammar is not more unpopular.—Atchison Globe.

"Well, you see, Mr. Gruff, I know how punctual you like all of your men to be, so I have an alarm clock, which I set for 7 in the morning. But, by mistake, I set it for 7 in the evening last night, and of course it didn't go off at 7 in the morning today, as usual. And I overslept myself."

"Ah, you did? Well, I'll excuse you this time. But set it properly after this."

And now the chap is wondering whether or not "the old man" was really fooled or merely wanted to let him down easy. Perhaps he thinks the boss believes he has a 24 hour clock.—Kansas City Journal.

Bull Baiting.

Although bull baiting was a cruel pastime, it was also a fulfilling of the law, for formerly no butcher was allowed to offer for sale the flesh of any bull that had not been baited. The goading of the animal in a fury was supposed to have some influence on the flesh. In a similar belief the flesh of a hunted hare was thought to be superior in flavor to that of one that had been shot, and a present of "a hunted hare" was considered to be a special compliment. In the records of the corporation of Leicester, England, the following order appears: "At a common hall, held on Thursday before St. Simon and St. Jude, 1467, 'no butcher to kill a bull till baited.'" At Winchester it was ordered (thirtieth Henry VIII) "that from hensforth ther shal be no bulstake set before any mayor's dore to bayte any bull, but onlie at the bull-ringe within the saide cytie."

The Perplexed Juror.

A man was being tried in New South Wales for stealing a watch. The evidence was conflicting, and the jury made up their minds to retire, but before they left the hall the judge remarked that if there were any points on which they required information he would be pleased to assist them. Eleven of the jurymen had left the box, but the twelfth remained standing, with his eyes fixed downward, as if absorbed in thought.

"Well, sir," said the judge, "is there any question you would like to ask me before you retire?"

"I would like to know, my lord," came the reply, "if you could tell us whether the prisoner stole the watch."

There are so many poor grammarians that we wonder grammar is not more unpopular.—Atchison Globe.

Every one ought to have a motto of his own. Mr. Ruskin's was a good one—"Today."

OUR BOARD OF TRADE.

The right note was struck by President Croxall and other speakers at the board of trade meeting last evening and a degree of earnestness and willingness to work for the city's welfare and advancement manifested that augurs well for the future usefulness of that body. All that is now needed is more volunteers who are willing to work for their own interests and those of the public. We believe that they will come forward, now that it is made plain that we have a working board of trade and that there is every prospect that it will have plenty to occupy its attention.

Those who hesitate and doubt should look at the facts. The mere published announcement that the East Liverpool board of trade had reorganized and proposed to encourage the establishment of new industries has already borne fruit. Several propositions from manufacturers seeking a location for new works have already come to the secretary and more are almost sure to come from time to time. This is a busy, prosperous period, and if this city is to get its share of the new establishments constantly springing up all over the country, it must have a board of trade to point out the advantages offered by the city and to at least make it apparent that the town is alive and wants to grow and will welcome and encourage those who are willing to invest money here and add to its industries.

There should be no thought of giving up the work now well begun. Some discouragement is inevitable in any venture; but we don't believe the men in the board of trade are such as to be dismayed by little dashes of cold water. There is work ahead, and work that will count if rightly done. When the board of trade membership numbers hundreds, instead of scores as at present, with each member a committee of one looking out for opportunities to benefit East Liverpool, the work will be easier for all interested. That time will come if the proper earnestness and determination to make the board of trade a big, permanent and progressive body, is manifested now.

DISFRANCHISING THE NEGRO.

Following the example set by other southern states, Alabama is about to hold a constitutional convention for the avowed purpose of disfranchising the negro. Senator Morgan does not mince matters as the object sought, and he recommends a plan which he thinks would be effectual. He proposes that boards of registers be established in every county, to which all voters must apply for certificates setting forth their qualifications and right to vote. The board is to examine the would-be voter and pass on the general question as to whether he is worthy to be admitted to the electorate, and its power is to be full and unrestricted. It is provided that a rejected applicant can appeal to the circuit court, which will have the same general power to say whether or not the applicant is worthy. The plan also proposes to confine the right to hold office rigidly to the white man.

The purpose is nullification of the fifteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, and is the boldest and most shameless of all the schemes concocted in the southern states for disfranchising the colored man, however intelligent he may be, and allowing the white man, however ignorant, all the rights of citizenship. And yet Morgan and others like him profess the most virtuous indignation when any northerner ventures to suggest that the negro is not treated just as he ought to be in the south.

The News Review today consists of 12 pages of six columns each—72 columns of most interesting matter—for the advertisements, which necessitate a considerable portion of the extra space, are read with interest by thousands of people. The News Review gives its readers in every issue more and better reading matter than is furnished by any other local paper. The intelligent public is not overlooking that fact, either, as the growth of subscription lists and advertising patronage fully demonstrates.

With an American's horse the winner of the English Derby and an American's yacht the winner in an international race as often as the experiment is tried, our cousins across the water will respect us more than ever.

David Nation says he will never live with Carrie again. He doesn't fear her hatchet, but he is tired of being pointed out as "Mrs. Nation's husband."

With Boers and Britons each reporting bloody victories almost daily, the pacification of the Transvaal appears still a long way off.

Tillman has reconsidered. His hindsight always was far superior to his foresight.

Mayor And Recorder Get $10 a Month Each And Police Chief $35, With Fees.

The Chester council held a brief session last evening, at which a few more laws were enacted and one old one repealed. All the members were present except Mayor Dunn.

The most important ordinance passed was the salary law, which fixed the compensation of the mayor at $10 per month and fees, the recorder's salary at $10 per month and the sergeant's pay at $25 per month and fees.

The proposition to put another policeman on the force was also discussed, but no action was taken.

The discussion of the cane rack ordinance occupied considerable time, Solicitor O. S. Marshall explaining that the law did not regard a cane rack as a game of chance, but a game of science, consequently all that could be done was to impose a license. Some of the solons wanted the cane rack prohibited altogether.

The ordinance imposing a special tax of $10 per annum on drug stores was repealed and a new ordinance making the tax $5 was passed.

A curfew ordinance was passed, imposing a fine of from $1 to $20 upon children of both sexes under the age of 14 years who were found on the streets after 9 o'clock in the winter months and 10 o'clock in the summer months, unless in charge of an adult.

The last law enacted prohibited loitering and loafing on the street corners and public highways and imposed a fine of from $1 to $20 for violation of the same.

It is the intention of the committee to make a renewed effort to push the project to a successful finish, and judging from the encouragement received last night from substantial business men, it is believed the proposition will be carried through.

The secretary stated that he had received a proposition from a large manufacturing concern, asking for a bonus of $250,000. He said it would be useless to say anything concerning its nature, as it seemed a hard matter to get people sufficiently interested to raise stock of one-tenth that amount for the glass house.

WAR ON GOTHAM VICE.

Committee of 15 Raids Resumed—Arrests and Evidence Secured.

New York, June 7.—Committee of fifteen raids were resumed through Justice Jerome, Colonel Robert Grier Monroe and Superintendent McCullagh. The Germania assembly rooms, in the Bowery, were raided without a prisoner being made, and No. 109 West Thirty-seventh street was also raided. This place, according to Superintendent McCullagh, is run by Frank Farrell, and he also says that Frank Burbridge, a western man, is a partner of Farrell. One prisoner was made in the Thirty-seventh street rooms. Justice Jerome intimated strongly that the Bowery raid was tipped off by the police.

When Justice Jerome and his party reached the place they found it in confusion and the door locked and barricaded. Tehy kicked the door and smashed it in. A hundred men were found in the room, but not one of the six who were wanted was there. Justice Jerome and the others picked up a soap box full of articles for evidence, consisting of racing cards, racing slips, etc.

The raid on the Thirty-seventh street house was made under the direction of Robert L. Woolley, of the committee of fifteen. Superintendent McSullagh's deputies had to break their way in. They found men escaping and men inside. A man who jumped to the ground from a window was arrested. Of the men inside one was arrested. Both were released. A quantity of pool room material was seized by the raiders as evidence.

THE LUTHERAN SYNOD.

Some Reports Were Read, Including That of Deaconess Board.

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—The closing day of the forty-third general synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church was yesterday. Many reports were read, including that of the deaconess board, the Sunday school board, common service and temperance committees.

The Rev. E. J. Wolfe, of Gettysburg, Pa., submitted a revised report on the condition of the church, which was adopted in place of the first report, which aroused a storm of protests from the delegates earlier in the week.

Discussion of the proposed abandonment of missionary work in Africa, and the devotion of the African fund to work among the negroes of this country continued. Considerable opposition developed in spite of the committee's report to the effect that the only effect of many years' work in Africa was a coffee field and a cemetery.

WAR ON GOTHAM VICE.

Committee of 15 Raids Resumed—Arrests and Evidence Secured.

New York, June 7.—Committee of fifteen raids were resumed through Justice Jerome, Colonel Robert Grier Monroe and Superintendent McCullagh. The Germania assembly rooms, in the Bowery, were raided without a prisoner being made, and No. 109 West Thirty-seventh street was also raided. This place, according to Superintendent McCullagh, is run by Frank Farrell, and he also says that Frank Burbridge, a western man, is a partner of Farrell. One prisoner was made in the Thirty-seventh street rooms. Justice Jerome intimated strongly that the Bowery raid was tipped off by the police.

When Justice Jerome and his party reached the place they found it in confusion and the door locked and barricaded. Tehy kicked the door and smashed it in. A hundred men were found in the room, but not one of the six who were wanted was there. Justice Jerome and the others picked up a soap box full of articles for evidence, consisting of racing cards, racing slips, etc.

The raid on the Thirty-seventh street house was made under the direction of Robert L. Woolley, of the committee of fifteen. Superintendent McSullagh's deputies had to break their way in. They found men escaping and men inside. A man who jumped to the ground from a window was arrested. Of the men inside one was arrested. Both were released. A quantity of pool room material was seized by the raiders as evidence.

THE LUTHERAN SYNOD.

Some Reports Were Read, Including That of Deaconess Board.

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—The closing day of the forty-third general synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church was yesterday. Many reports were read, including that of the deaconess board, the Sunday school board, common service and temperance committees.

The Rev. E. J. Wolfe, of Gettysburg, Pa., submitted a revised report on the condition of the church, which was adopted in place of the first report, which aroused a storm of protests from the delegates earlier in the week.

Discussion of the proposed abandonment of missionary work in Africa, and the devotion of the African fund to work among the negroes of this country continued. Considerable opposition developed in spite of the committee's report to the effect that the only effect of many years' work in Africa was a coffee field and a cemetery.

MOIR NO LONGER RECORDER.

His Resignation Accepted and W. L. Connell Appointed.

Harrisburg, June 7.—W. L. Connell of Scranton, was appointed recorder of Scranton by Governor Stone, to succeed James Moir, resigned. The resignation of Recorder Moir was received in the governor's morning mail Thursday and was promptly accepted and his successor appointed.

Mr. Moir was Scranton's first recorder under the second class city charter, commonly known as the Pittsburg ripper. He was appointed by the governor on the day on which the bill was signed. Under the act the executive is empowered to remove the recorder at his pleasure.

The Municipal league, of Scranton, made formal application to the governor last Saturday for the recorder's dismissal. A hearing was to have been given both sides, but the resignation made this unnecessary, and the whole matter has been dropped.

A Happy Foot.

The custom of wishing a friend "a happy foot" is to be found in all parts of Europe, and it goes to show how much superstition is connected with our footgear. It is to be assumed that the well fitting boot or shoe, which enables a person to walk in comfort, is symbolical of happiness.

The accidental placing of the right shoe on the left foot, putting a shoe on awry or the breaking of a lace is a bad sign from the popular point of view. To tie the shoe of another individual is indicative of humility and lowly position, yet the Chinese worship the shoes of an upright judge.

There is a curious superstition in some parts of England which advises that when the youngest daughter marries before her sisters the latter should dance at her wedding without shoes in order to insure husbands for themselves. On St. Valentine's eve, according to a similar custom, girls should hang their shoes outside the window if they wish to secure lovers.

Some actresses carefully preserve the boots they wore when they scored their first success and wear them on all important occasions.

Got More For the Money.

A gentleman living in a rural part of England sent his coachman to a neighboring village for 5 shillings' worth of penny stamps.

After a time John returned from his tramp of two miles

His face wore a self satisfied look when he came into his employer's presence.

"Got the stamps, John?"

"Yes, sir," the man replied, handing over a batch of halfpenny stamps.

"I said penny stamps, John, and you have got halfpenny ones."

"Yes, sir," and the smile widened. "I asked for 5 shillings' worth of stamps, an the postmaster says, 'Halfpenny or penny?' 'Do you sell halfpenny stamps?' I asked. 'Yes,' said he. 'Well,' says I, 'if you can buy stamps for a halfpenny, what's the use of payin a penny?' An I bought the halfpenny stamps, sir."—London Telegraph.

Thrift In Children.

A savings bank account is a great incentive to thrift in children. If one is begun for the baby, even with a very small sum, and added through childhood and youth with a certain proportion of the money that otherwise would be spent carelessly and thoughtlessly by the child, there will be a very respectable amount on the credit side of the ledger when the depositor is 18 years old. The habit of self denial is not the least of the substantial benefits that follow a wise economy of money.—Exchange.

A WRETCHED MONARCH.

Some Facts About the Mad King Otto's Life.

DISEASE MAKING RAPID PROGRESS.

He Will Not Take Proper Treatment and Sings For Hours at Night—Falls Asleep Only Toward Dawn—Tortured With Fear, He Refuses to Eat.

According to reports from Munich, the condition of the insane King Otto, who some days ago celebrated his fifty-third birthday, has again become somewhat critical, the renal disease from which he suffers making all the more rapid progress as the unhappy monarch, who is exceedingly strong, will not let himself be examined or treated, writes the London correspondent of the New York Sun. As he cannot be induced to take the necessary diet and baths which would increase the activity of the heart efforts are made to introduce secretly into his food medicaments to prevent chronic inflammation of the arteries and dropsy. Sometimes, in order to rouse him, he is allowed to see persons whom he once knew and whose features he remembers from his boyhood. These he at once recognizes, calling them by their names. He dines, smokes and plays with them for some time and then suddenly breaks off, becomes apathetic, pulls at his beard and then commences to undress himself just where he is.

The king rises very irregularly. Sometimes, according to his mood, he tosses himself about in bed till late in the day, rolls himself up in the bedclothes and then throws them off with his feet or hands. There are days when he cannot be induced to leave his bed or his room, and as exercise is necessary for this strong and lately very stout man everything possible is done to get him out into the park or at least on to the terrace.

There are also days when the king is tortured with fear and cannot be prevailed upon to eat anything. At these times when his breakfast is brought in he peeps slyly at the lackeys, who wait on him with as much ceremony as if he were sane. At other times, when he is hungry and wants to eat, he does not wait till they have left the room, but pounces on everything on the table ravenously. But generally he waits till the lackeys have gone and then eats everything up. When the servants reappear and find the empty dishes, the king laughs heartily. Owing to his complete want of exercise he suffers from sleeplessness. At night he sits for hours in his room, sometimes talking aloud to himself, sometimes singing, in a beautiful voice, and only toward morning falls asleep.

Great stress is laid at Castle Furstenried on the same ceremony and treatment being given for the sick king as if he were in good health. However curious it may sound, it seems as if the king himself takes care that he should receive royal attentions. He notices exactly what goes on around him, and when he is to be induced by stratagem to do anything, for instance, if he is wanted to take a drive, the doctors must never betray their intention, for then the king offers such resistance and gets so furious that doctors and attendants have quickly to retire. But if he can be made to believe that he can outwit his doctors and make fools of them he does what is wanted. In order to get him into the carriage to take a drive the following maneuver is resorted to: The carriage drives up to the gate of the garden and is apparently left alone there. As soon as the king thinks he is not watched he jumps into the carriage and calls for the coachman without being in the least astonished at seeing his doctor follow him into it.

Mr. Stedman to Write an Ode.

Edmund Clarence Stedman has been selected to write the commemorative ode for the Yale bicentennial next October. Justice David J. Brewer of the United States supreme court will deliver the commemorative oration.

Now Once Again.

Now once again the jaybird sings
Its ragtime carols to the jays,
And rustic barnyard loudly rings
With speckled hen's exultant lays.
Again we hear the merry bark
Of yonder spreading dogwood trees,
And meadow larks go on a lark
And whistle at the passing breeze,
And, mopping his perspiring brow,
The hired man chases up the plow.

Now once again we hear the hum
Of busy bees that feed us honey,
And fakirs to the country come
To part the granger from his money.
The placid meadow brooks again
Have got their babbling habit on,
And rustic poets seize the pen
And roll their eyes like dying fawn
And, fanned by a gentle muse's wing,
Indite their lyrics to the spring.

Now once again adown the lane,
Beneath the moonlight on the farm,
John Henry and his Mary Jane
In love's young dream stroll arm in arm.
They do not whisper words of love,
But speak them out in accents clear,
Because, 'neath yonder skies above,
There's no one but the cows to hear,
And oft explodes a hearty kiss
That sounds as popgun charged with bliss.

Now once again the bullfrog sits
And bellows at the rising moon,
And through the air the black bat flits,
And tree toads get their pipes in tune,
And from their birthplace farm wives swipe
The eggs the fruitful hens have laid,
Selecting those too overripe
To take to stores in town to trade
For anything they think is nice
And is a bargain at the price.

Now once again we soon will fly
Unto those rural scenes so gay
On our vacation, you and I,
To while a slice of time away.
All through the day we'll sit and roast
And fight mosquitoes through the night
And then return and proudly boast
Of rural pleasures out of sight,
Our faces tanned an Injun black,
Our cash blown into Reuben's sack.
—James Barton Adams in Denver Post.

A STORY OF BABYLON.

Reginald De Koven's Wife Has Just Published a Mystical Romance.

"By the Waters of Babylon" is the title of a strange, mystical, historical romance that has just been published by Mrs. Reginald De Koven, the wife of the popular composer of light operas. In some respects the novel promises to be the literary sensation of the season, for it is entirely different from any of the books that have preceded it in public favor.

According to Mrs. De Koven, "By the Waters of Babylon" has to do with the captive Jews and is a historical and archæological stury of a period never before used in romance. Its plot is made up of the historical material found in the ancient histories and in the mass of bas-relief and cuneiform tablets recovered from the ruins of the buried cities of Babylonia and Assyria. But it seems to be dramatic in its treatment, and the information is always subordinated to the interests of the plot. "By the Waters of Babylon" is not, therefore, a mere stirring up of dry historical bones, but a living, breathing tale of human interest and dramatic intensity.

Mrs. De Koven has been collecting material for her novel for a number of years and has had the assistance of some of the leading archæologists of America in her researches. This is not her first venture in authorship. Several years ago she published a novel called "A Sawdust Doll." She has also made a translation of one of Pierre Loti's novels that has gained great praise for its literary excellence.

Before her marriage to Mr. De Koven the author of "By the Waters of Babylon" was one of the leading society belles of Chicago. They were wedded in 1887. Mrs. De Koven was born in Chicago and is the eldest of the three beautiful daughters of ex-Senator Charles B. Farwell. She has had the advantage of the highest education and of foreign travel and is a woman of rare brilliance. Until a short time ago the De Kovens lived in New York. Their home was distinguished as the gathering place of a coterie of some of the most brilliant minds of Gotham's literary, artistic and musical circles. The composer of "Robin Hood" and his wife now reside in Washington, where they are equally popular.

AN HONORED AMERICAN.

Siam Chooses a Yankee to Represent Her in the Arbitration Court.

To an American has been given the honor of representing Siam at the international court of arbitration. The American thus distinguished is Frederick W. Holls of New York. At the present time Mr. Holls is engaged in a sightseeing tour of Europe.

Mr. Holls will be remembered as the secretary of the American delegation to the peace conference held at The Hague in 1899. One of the results of that meeting was the establishment of a permanent court of arbitration. It is to this that Mr. Holls is to act as Siam's delegate.

Frederick William Holls is a lawyer by profession, but he has also gained laurels as a scholar, an author and a traveler. He is a native of Pennsylvania and is 44 years old. He was educated at Columbia university and in the Columbia Law school. In 1880 Mr. Holls was admitted to the New York bar, and he has been in active practice since.

LOCOMOTIVE TRUST'S HEAD

Ex-President of the New York Central Has Risen From the Ranks.

"It was a matter of money with me," said Mr. Samuel R. Callaway when explaining his recent acceptance of the presidency of the American Locomotive company at a salary of $50,000 a year. "I have been a salaried man all my life, and I felt it due to my family to make the best of my opportunities. I have never speculated; am just a plain plodder." It is not at all likely, however, that Mr. Callaway's family would have suffered had he not accepted the offer of the presidency of "the locomotive trust," since his salary as president of the New York Central railroad has been $50,000 a year.

The American Locomotive company, to head which Mr. Callaway has been taken from the New York Central, is the newly organized corporation that will control about two-thirds of the output of locomotives in the United States. It is capitalized at $50,000,000 and has taken over all of the large works with the exception of the Baldwin. The new "trust" will have an average daily output of seven complete locomotives.

Few people who know him will agree with Mr. Callaway's modest estimate of himself as "just a plain plodder" unless "plodding" means an infinite capacity for work. It is said that in the three years or so that Mr. Callaway has been president of the Central he has done work that before his advent required two vice presidents and a general manager. He leaves the Central with only the most cordial of feelings. The Vanderbilts, who control that system, are also largely interested in the American Locomotive company.

The new president of the locomotive "trust" is a Canadian by birth and is 51 years of age. At 14 he entered the service of the Grand Trunk railroad at Montreal as an office boy. Promotion came to him rapidly, for he is eminently fitted by nature to attend to routine matters as well as those of greater importance. He worked his way up through the various grades and in 1869 became chief clerk to the superintendent of the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad. Since then he has held a number of important railroad positions, always advancing.

JAPAN'S EMPRESS A POET.

In Her Verses Haruko Shows Her Sympathy For the Working Classes.

However well I am wrapped with silk and brocade
The thought of the poor, who have even no sleeves
To shield them against the cold,
Comes into my mind. Ah!

Thus runs the translation of a Japanese poem whose author is no other than the occupant of a throne. Like her sister sovereign, Carmen Sylva, queen of Roumania, the empress of Japan has taken to authorship. The empress' writings have taken the form of verse. In her stanzas she expresses her deep feeling for those of less wealth and lower station. Like most oriental poetry, the verses of the empress are in the form of quatrains, each embodying a single thought. Most of them are remarkable for the deep ethical sentiment that pervades them, and earnest seekers find in them evidences that the writer is imbued with the spirit and teachings of Christianity.

It has long been known that the empress of Japan is a woman of a very charitable disposition. Whenever an occasion of suffering in her own country is brought to her attention, she is unsparing in her measures of relief. She is greatly interested in the hospitals of Japan and is chief patroness of the national Red Cross.

There is a curious superstition in some parts of England which advises that when the youngest daughter marries before her sisters the latter should dance at her wedding without shoes in order to insure husbands for themselves. On St. Valentine's eve, according to a similar custom, girls should hang their shoes outside the window if they wish to secure lovers.

Some actresses carefully preserve the boots they wore when they scored their first success and wear them on all important occasions.

Got More For the Money.

A gentleman living in a rural part of England sent his coachman to a neighboring village for 5 shillings' worth of penny stamps.

After a time John returned from his tramp of two miles.

His face wore a self satisfied look when he came into his employer's presence.

"Got the stamps, John?"

"Yes, sir," the man replied, handing over a batch of halfpenny stamps.

"I said penny stamps, John, and you have got halfpenny ones."

"Yes, sir," and the smile widened. "I asked for 5 shillings' worth of stamps, an the postmaster says, 'Halfpenny or penny?' 'Do you sell halfpenny stamps?' I asked. 'Yes,' said he. 'Well,' says I, 'if you can buy stamps for a halfpenny, what's the use of payin a penny?' An I bought the halfpenny stamps, sir."—London Telegraph.

Thrift In Children.

A savings bank account is a great incentive to thrift in children. If one is begun for the baby, even with a very small sum, and added through childhood and youth with a certain proportion of the money that otherwise would be spent carelessly and thoughtlessly by the child, there will be a very respectable amount on the credit side of the ledger when the depositor is 18 years old. The habit of self denial is not the least of the substantial benefits that follow a wise economy of money.—Exchange.

A WRETCHED MONARCH.

Some Facts About the Mad King Otto's Life.

DISEASE MAKING RAPID PROGRESS.

He Will Not Take Proper Treatment and Sings For Hours at Night—Falls Asleep Only Toward Dawn—Tortured With Fear, He Refuses to Eat.

According to reports from Munich, the condition of the insane King Otto, who some days ago celebrated his fifty-third birthday, has again become somewhat critical, the renal disease from which he suffers making all the more rapid progress as the unhappy monarch, who is exceedingly strong, will not let himself be examined or treated, writes the London correspondent of the New York Sun. As he cannot be induced to take the necessary diet and baths which would increase the activity of the heart efforts are made to introduce secretly into his food medicaments to prevent chronic inflammation of the arteries and dropsy. Sometimes, in order to rouse him, he is allowed to see persons whom he once knew and whose features he remembers from his boyhood. These he at once recognizes, calling them by their names. He dines, smokes and plays with them for some time and then suddenly breaks off, becomes apathetic, pulls at his beard and then commences to undress himself just where he is.

The king rises very irregularly. Sometimes, according to his mood, he tosses himself about in bed till late in the day, rolls himself up in the bedclothes and then throws them off with his feet or hands. There are days when he cannot be induced to leave his bed or his room, and as exercise is necessary for this strong and lately very stout man everything possible is done to get him out into the park or at least on to the terrace.

There are also days when the king is tortured with fear and cannot be prevailed upon to eat anything. At these times when his breakfast is brought in he peeps slyly at the lackeys, who wait on him with as much ceremony as if he were sane. At other times, when he is hungry and wants to eat, he does not wait till they have left the room, but pounces on everything on the table ravenously. But generally he waits till the lackeys have gone and then eats everything up. When the servants reappear and find the empty dishes, the king laughs heartily. Owing to his complete want of exercise he suffers from sleeplessness. At night he sits for hours in his room, sometimes talking aloud to himself, sometimes singing, in a beautiful voice, and only toward morning falls asleep.

Great stress is laid at Castle Furstenried on the same ceremony and treatment being given for the sick king as if he were in good health. However curious it may sound, it seems as if the king himself takes care that he should receive royal attentions. He notices exactly what goes on around him, and when he is to be induced by stratagem to do anything, for instance, if he is wanted to take a drive, the doctors must never betray their intention, for then the king offers such resistance and gets so furious that doctors and attendants have quickly to retire. But if he can be made to believe that he can outwit his doctors and make fools of them he does what is wanted. In order to get him into the carriage to take a drive the following maneuver is resorted to: The carriage drives up to the gate of the garden and is apparently left alone there. As soon as the king thinks he is not watched he jumps into the carriage and calls for the coachman without being in the least astonished at seeing his doctor follow him into it.

Mr. Stedman to Write an Ode.

Edmund Clarence Stedman has been selected to write the commemorative ode for the Yale bicentennial next October. Justice David J. Brewer of the United States supreme court will deliver the commemorative oration.

Now Once Again.

Now once again the jaybird sings
  Its ragtime carols to the jays,
And rustic barnyard loudly rings
  With speckled hen's exultant lays.
Again we hear the merry bark
  Of yonder spreading dogwood trees,
And meadow larks go on a lark
  And whistle at the passing breeze,
And, mopping his perspiring brow,
The hired man chases up the plow.

Now once again we hear the hum
  Of busy bees that feed us honey,
And fakirs to the country come
  To part the granger from his money.
The placid meadow brooks again
  Have got their babbling habit on,
And rustic poets seize the pen
  And roll their eyes like dying fawn
And, fanned by a gentle muse's wing,
Indite their lyrics to the spring.

Now once again adown the lane,
  Beneath the moonlight on the farm,
John Henry and his Mary Jane
  In love's young dream stroll arm in arm.
They do not whisper words of love,
  But speak them out in accents clear,
Because, 'neath yonder skies above,
  There's no one but the cows to hear,
And oft explodes a hearty kiss
That sounds as popgun charged with bliss.

Now once again the bullfrog sits
  And bellows at the rising moon,
And through the air the black bat flits,
  And tree toads get their pipes in tune,
And from their birthplace farm wives swipe
  The eggs the fruitful hens have laid,
Selecting those too overripe
  To take to stores in town to trade
For anything they think is nice
And is a bargain at the price.

Now once again we soon will fly
  Unto those rural scenes so gay
On our vacation, you and I,
  To while a slice of time away.
All through the day we'll sit and roast
  And fight mosquitoes through the night
And then return and proudly boast
  Of rural pleasures out of sight,
Our faces tanned an Injun black,
Our cash blown into Reuben's sack.

A STORY OF BABYLON.

Reginald De Koven's Wife Has Just Published a Mystical Romance.

"By the Waters of Babylon" is the title of a strange, mystical, historical romance that has just been published by Mrs. Reginald De Koven, the wife of the popular composer of light operas. In some respects the novel promises to be the literary sensation of the season, for it is entirely different from any of the books that have preceded it in public favor.

According to Mrs. De Koven, "By the Waters of Babylon" has to do with the captive Jews and is a historical and archaeological stury of a period never before used in romance. Its plot is made up of the historical material found in the ancient histories and in the mass of bas-relief and cuneiform tablets recovered from the ruins of the buried cities of Babylonia and Assyria. But it seems to be dramatic in its treatment, and the information is always subordinated to the interests of the plot. "By the Waters of Babylon" is not, therefore, a mere stirring up of dry historical bones, but a living, breathing tale of human interest and dramatic intensity.

Mrs. De Koven has been collecting material for her novel for a number of years and has had the assistance of some of the leading archæologists of America in her researches. This is not her first venture in authorship. Several years ago she published a novel called "A Sawdust Doll." She has also made a translation of one of Pierre Loti's novels that has gained great praise for its literary excellence.

Before her marriage to Mr. De Koven the author of "By the Waters of Babylon" was one of the leading society belles of Chicago. They were wedded in 1887. Mrs. De Koven was born in Chicago and is the eldest of the three beautiful daughters of ex-Senator Charles B. Farwell. She has had the advantage of the highest education and of foreign travel and is a woman of rare brilliance. Until a short time ago the De Kovens lived in New York. Their home was distinguished as the gathering place of a coterie of some of the most brilliant minds of Gotham's literary, artistic and musical circles. The composer of "Robin Hood" and his wife now reside in Washington, where they are equally popular.

AN HONORED AMERICAN.

Siam Chooses a Yankee to Represent Her In the Arbitration Court.

To an American has been given the honor of representing Siam at the international court of arbitration. The American thus distinguished is Frederick W. Holls of New York. At the present time Mr. Holls is engaged in a sightseeing tour of Europe.

Mr. Holls will be remembered as the secretary of the American delegation to the peace conference held at The Hague in 1899. One of the results of that meeting was the establishment of a permanent court of arbitration. It is to this that Mr. Holls is to act as Siam's delegate.

Frederick William Holls is a lawyer by profession, but he has also gained laurels as a scholar, an author and a traveler. He is a native of Pennsylvania and is 44 years old. He was educated at Columbia university and in the Columbia Law school. In 1880 Mr. Holls was admitted to the New York bar, and he has been in active practice since.

LOCOMOTIVE TRUST'S HEAD

Ex-President of the New York Central Has Risen From the Ranks.

"It was a matter of money with me," said Mr. Samuel R. Callaway when explaining his recent acceptance of the presidency of the American Locomotive company at a salary of $50,000 a year. "I have been a salaried man all my life, and I felt it due to my family to make the best of my opportunities. I have never speculated; am just a plain plodder." It is not at all likely, however, that Mr. Callaway's family would have suffered had he not accepted the offer of the presidency of "the locomotive trust," since his salary as president of the New York Central railroad has been $50,000 a year.

The American Locomotive company, to head which Mr. Callaway has been taken from the New York Central, is the newly organized corporation that will control about two-thirds of the output of locomotives in the United States. It is capitalized at $50,000,000 and has taken over all of the large works with the exception of the Baldwin. The new "trust" will have an average daily output of seven complete locomotives.

Few people who know him will agree with Mr. Callaway's modest estimate of himself as "just a plain plodder" unless "plodding" means an infinite capacity for work. It is said that in the three years or so that Mr. Callaway has been president of the Central he has done work that before his advent required two vice presidents and a general manager. He leaves the Central with only the most cordial of feelings. The Vanderbilts, who control that system, are also largely interested in the American Locomotive company.

The new president of the locomotive "trust" is a Canadian by birth and is 51 years of age. At 14 he entered the service of the Grand Trunk railroad at Montreal as an office boy. Promotion came to him rapidly, for he is eminently fitted by nature to attend to routine matters as well as those of greater importance. He worked his way up through the various grades and in 1869 became chief clerk to the superintendent of the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad. Since then he has held a number of important railroad positions, always advancing.

JAPAN'S EMPRESS A POET.

In Her Verses Haruko Shows Her Sympathy For the Working Classes.

However well I am wrapped with silk and brocade
The thought of the poor, who have even no sleeves
To shield them against the cold,
Comes into my mind. Ah!

Thus runs the translation of a Japanese poem whose author is no other than the occupant of a throne. Like her sister sovereign, Carmen Sylva, queen of Roumania, the empress of Japan has taken to authorship. The empress' writings have taken the form of verse. In her stanzas she expresses her deep feeling for those of less wealth and lower station. Like most oriental poetry, the verses of the empress are in the form of quatrains, each embodying a single thought. Most of them are remarkable for the deep ethical sentiment that pervades them, and earnest seekers find in them evidences that the writer is imbued with the spirit and teachings of Christianity.

It has long been known that the empress of Japan is a woman of a very charitable disposition. Whenever an occasion of suffering in her own country is brought to her attention, she is unsparing in her measures of relief. She is greatly interested in the hospitals of Japan and is chief patroness of the national Red Cross.

PANIC THURSDAY TALES.

Philadelphia Woman Refuses Her $100,000 "Nipper" Profit.

TROUBLED BY HER CONSCIENCE.

Her Broker Puzzled as to How the Case May Be Adjusted—Absent Northern Pacific Shareholder Misses a Million—Costly Dinner Temper of a Dowager.

Although the excitement over the cornering of Northern Pacific has died down, stories of the fortunes that might have been keep coming in from all parts of the United States. One of the most remarkable of all the tales comes from Philadelphia.

It seems that a woman over there owned 200 shares of the stock, bought years ago when the stock was selling below par. The stock was located by somebody in New York, and on the morning of panic Thursday she was advised to sell and realize a handsome profit on her investment. She thought the matter over for awhile and concluded to follow the advice. The stock was sold at 600, and in course of time the woman received a check for $120,000. The transaction presented a profit considerably more than $100,000.

Between the time she authorized the sale of the stock and the time she received the check the woman read about the panic and the corner and the great losses they had caused. Her conscience fell to work, and she concluded that the profit she had received might have come from somebody whose fortune had been wrecked. She refused to accept the check. Returning it, she said it was too great a profit to be made on such a transaction and that she felt that she would be guilty of great wrongdoing if she accepted the check. The broker through whom the stock was sold still has the check and is at a loss at present to know just how the trouble which the woman's conscience has occasioned can be adjusted.

The real thing in the way of a Northern Pacific hard luck story is told on a member of one of the largest mercantile houses in New York who married into one of the richest families in the United States. He has been abroad for some time past, but has been where he could keep in touch with what was going on in New York through the foreign newspapers. A few days ago he noticed in the papers that an attempt was being made to corner Northern Pacific and that the price of the stock had gone kiting. He had 4,000 shares and concluded to sell at once. Accordingly he cabled to his New York brokers to sell him out at the market. They tried to execute the order when the stock was up around 400 or 500. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were ready to take the stock, but the brokers had no power of attorney under which the stock could be transferred. Although the responsibility of the brokers to their principal was not doubted for a moment, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were taking no chances in those times, therefore the stock was not sold, and the owner lost not far from $1,000,000 profit, says the New York Sun.

When the world was being combed for the stock in the days immediately preceding the panic, it was learned that a certain fashionable New York dowager was the possessor of something like 400 shares. The stock was bought years ago by her late husband, when a bushel of shares could be obtained for a song, and not much of a song at that. The other evening a broker called up the woman's residence on the telephone. He learned that she was at a dinner party and got the name of her hostess on the plea of highly important business. The hostess had a telephone, and the broker finally succeeded in getting the dowager to it. He told her that her stock was wanted, that she could realize a small fortune by selling and asked if he might sell the stock. The reply he got was:

"This is the greatest piece of impertinence I have ever heard of. You have actually called me from a dinner party to discuss a matter of business. Please be good enough never to annoy me like this again."

Then she hung up the receiver, and the broker as he hung up his said to himself what he wouldn't say to a lady. He seemed to have a very definite idea of a locality where she might spend the summer for all he cared. Later he had the satisfaction of knowing that the dowager regretted more than she will ever be able to tell that she didn't sell the stock.

A few weeks ago a yachtsman known almost as well on the other side of the ocean as on this was advised to buy United States Steel common. "All right," said he to the man who gave the advice. "I'll buy it when it can be bought at 25. I'd like some at that price, and you can take my order now for 500 shares to be executed when you can buy the stock at that figure."

The stock was then selling around 50, and the broker laughed at the order, but said he would execute it if he ever got the chance. Shortly before noon on Thursday 1,800 shares of United States Steel common were sold at 25, and 500 of those shares were bought for the yachtsman.

Sweet Pea Day at Buffalo.

DRESS AND FASSION

THE DAY OF THE HORSE AND THE HORSEWOMAN HAS COME AGAIN.

Present Fashions In Habits, Including Those of Little Folk—The Hat and the Coiffure—Summer Modifications of the Styles.

Did anybody remark that the horse has had his day? Of course the horse really has had his day. In fact, he's had several kinds of day, and the latest one, thanks to the bicycle, was a day off. Just at present, however, the horse has jumped back into fashion again. He is simply getting there with both feet and both pairs of feet.

It is a fact that there are shoals of men, women, children and girls riding this spring. The girls are mentioned separately because there are so many of them and because they catch and hold the eye more than any other variety of equestrian. Sometimes, alas, the spectator's eye seems to be about the only thing they do catch and hold, says the New York Sun in pleasant preface to some very practical information and sketches apropos of the new fashion.

Here are the rules and regulations for the riding habit, feminine gender, present tense and grown up person: The hat is a round crowned black derby, with a rubber going under the hair in the back. The doing up of the hair, by the way, is one of the most vital problems to the woman rider. Pompadours and artistic disorder are out of the question. Five minutes' riding will make a girl who goes in for artistic disorder in hairdressing look like a Yorkshire terrier.

Middle aged women do their hair in a knot at the back of their head, anchoring this knot by means of kinky hairpins. But younger women revert to their girlhood days, braid their hair in a tail, turn it up and tie it with a ribbon bow at the nape of the neck.

The riding habit which seems to be most satisfactory to the experienced horsewoman is of black cheviot. The skirt is made of the length which has now superseded the old flowing death traps. It buttons all the way up from hem to band with safety buttons, so that if the rider is thrown or the saddle turns and the skirt catches these buttons rip open and let her fall free instead of being dragged.

The once popular basque with the postilion back is absolutely out of style now. The proper thing is what is called the English coat. This is cut straight around, rather full in the skirts, which vary in length from 6 or 8 to 12 or 14 inches. With this coat is worn a white stock and ascot with a horsy pin.

Young girls and even young women are permitted to wear a norfolk jacket. For girls of, say, 12 to 16 the norfolk is quite the proper thing. Girls of this age, too, may wear colored habits, mixed gray and black or blue. The real little girls wear their soft felt hats set on the back of their heads and with the rubber under their chins. They put on a full skirt, weighted, of course, but not cut in any of the eccentric geometrical angles necessary for the grown up habits.

Gloves are of heavy dark brown dogskin, with welt seams. Crops and whips are about equally in favor.

For warm weather riding, shirt waists and straw hats are perfectly admissible. There are women, however, who don't like to ride in a shirt waist, and they are advised to try heavy linen habits, made exactly like one of cloth. These habits are unlined and are not starched when done up. They are ironed when wet.

The really swell girl who rides at the academy considers the appearance she must make in transit, so to speak, as well as when she is actually riding. That is to say, she wants to have the proper coat to wear on the street. The long raglans or variations of raglans have been a godsend to her this season.

COACHING IN FAVOR

REMARKABLE REVIVAL OF THIS SPIRITED SPORT IS IN PROGRESS.

Country Around New York, Owing to Its Good Roads, the Coacher's Paradise — European Coaching Trips Now Possible.

In spite of the threatened extinction of the horse through the introduction of the automobile, the ancient and honorable sport of coaching is holding its own among those who have the time and money to indulge in it. There seems to be something that makes a peculiar appeal to the human heart in the spectacle of a great, finely decorated coach drawn by a number of spirited, swift horses and driven by a man who knows the delicate art of handling the reins. Very frequently, too, of recent years "society" women have shown that underneath the fair tinted skin of their hands and wrists lay muscles possessing sufficient power to hold the ribbons over the backs of four or even more powerful steeds. Besides affording joy to the spectators, the exhilaration of one's first ride on top of a swiftly moving coach is an experience never to be forgotten. No; coaching is not "going out," and it probably never will as long as men and women continue to love the horse and the ride over good roads on top of a coach.

Of course coaching can be indulged in only where there are good roads, and therefore those interested in it are to be found among the most ardent supporters of the good roads movement. The paradise of coachers in America is New York. Stretching to the north and northeast of the eastern metropolis are a number of splendid hard macadam highways that are especially suited to coaching. Up into Westchester county to the pretty towns along the Hudson is a favorite route. All along the eastern bank of the river, amid beautiful scenery, are located the summer homes of many millionaires, while country clubs abound. Another well liked coaching trip is along the roads leading beside Lond Island sound to Larchmont, Pelham, New Rochelle, etc. Coaching in other sections of the country than that around New York, owing possibly to the reprehensible condition of many of our highways, has not made much headway. When the roads receive their much needed improvement, undoubtedly society in other cities will follow the lead of New York.

A favorite little trip of New York's coaching parties these days is that to the Morris park race course, which is situated in the upper part of the city. On race days the inclosure for carriages and coaches presents a pretty scene, the brilliant toilets of the ladies lending to it color and animation. Coaching parties to the race track and elsewhere have been more popular this season than for some time.

That not alone "society," but the general public as well, is interested in coaching was shown at the recent parade of the Coaching club of New York. Seven handsome four-in-hands drawn by magnificent horses were in line, and they passed through a solid mass of admiring people as they were driven through Central park. This was the first coaching parade for five years and was led by Colonel William Jay, the president of the Coaching club. After the procession Colonel Jay said that it was as successful a parade in point of enthusiasm as the club had ever held.

To meet the demand for a resting place for New York's coaching parties Colonel John Jacob Astor is about to erect a beautiful inn at the junction of Pelham parkway and Williamsbridge road, a few miles out of the crowded part of the city. The new structure, which is to cost $200,000, will be a beautiful building, supplied with the latest improvements.

Not satisfied with coaching in America, enthusiastic followers of the sport are now arranging coaching trips on the other side of the Atlantic. The organization of an international coaching company has recently made it possible for an American going to Europe to order six months in advance the coach in which he wishes to travel between any two points in his journey. It is indeed possible now to arrange an entire trip by coach and to follow it out with absolute certainty. The ultimate end of the new enterprise is the establishment of a series of coaches to carry American tourists from one end of Europe to the other. Preparation of all the details of the trip may be made in advance, even to the ordering of luncheon to be ready on a certain day six months ahead.

GONE TO THE VERGE.

He Thought He Had Reached Friendship's Limit.

This young man is not so confiding as he was, and his ideas of friendship are not so exalted. Yet he takes it philosophically and is willing to place a heavy credit in favor of experience.

"I started in a small way," he tells, "and I had an idea that my business would expand rapidly. But I find a good many leaks and drains. Of course you know Jones. He is my friend and knows about horses. So when my one horse went lame I consulted him as being the one friend I had who, I thought, could help me out.

"'Pretty bad shape,' he said as he looked the nag over. 'Need him on your delivery wagon, don't you?'

"I need him or some other horse and asked Jones what I could get for the lame one. He looked him over, felt his legs, examined his eyes and teeth and finally said that, being a friend of mine, he'd give me $40 for the horse. I took it. That same afternoon he sold the horse for $80, a fact I learned about a week later.

"'Now,' said Jones, 'I'm not the man to leave a friend in a scrape. I'll just rustle around and find you another horse.'

"'Thank you, but keep within a hundred. I can't afford to pay more.'

"Next morning my friend showed up with a horse he told me I could have for $98, though he was really worth more. He was sound, gentle, 7 years old, according to Jones.

"He had bought that horse for $60. He had spavin and ringbone, was knee sprung and 13 years old. So Jones had made $78 off me and left me with one of the worst old crowbaits you ever saw. I'm not saying much about it, for Jones is my friend, you know. But an old codger that buys groceries from me says friendship ceases in a horse dicker."—Detroit Free Press.

The Redcoats.

An incident at the siege of Rouen, in 1591, shows that red was looked upon as the English color, for in mentioning the death of one of the Earl of Essex's captains it is remarked that the Frenchman who shot him got near enough to do so by putting on the red coat of a dead English soldier. In 1643 the king's life guards, as also the queen's and Prince Rupert's, wore red coats.

It Brings Her, Etc.

"What do you do when your wife gets sulky and refuses to talk to you?"

"Why, I begin to praise Mrs. Allgood, across the street, or some other woman I know she detests."

"And that brings her, eh?"

"Yes, it brings her and sometimes everything throwable that happens to be in her reach too."—Salt Lake City Tribune.

PANIC THURSDAY TALES.

Philadelphia Woman Refuses Her $100,000 "Nipper" Profit.

TROUBLED BY HER CONSCIENCE.

Her Broker Puzzled as to How the Case May Be Adjusted—Absent Northern Pacific Shareholder Misses a Million—Costly Dianer Temper of a Dowager.

Although the excitement over the cornering of Northern Pacific has died down, stories of the fortunes that might have been keep coming in from all parts of the United States. One of the most remarkable of all the tales comes from Philadelphia.

It seems that a woman over there owned 200 shares of the stock, bought years ago when the stock was selling below par. The stock was located by somebody in New York, and on the morning of panic Thursday she was advised to sell and realize a handsome profit on her investment. She thought the matter over for awhile and concluded to follow the advice. The stock was sold at 600, and in course of time the woman received a check for $120,000. The transaction presented a profit considerably more than $100,000.

Between the time she authorized the sale of the stock and the time she received the check the woman read about the panic and the corner and the great losses they had caused. Her conscience fell to work, and she concluded that the profit she had received might have come from somebody whose fortune had been wrecked. She refused to accept the check. Returning it, she said it was too great a profit to be made on such a transaction and that she felt that she would be guilty of great wrongdoing if she accepted the check. The broker through whom the stock was sold still has the check and is at a loss at present to know just how the trouble which the woman's conscience has occasioned can be adjusted.

The real thing in the way of a Northern Pacific hard luck story is told on a member of one of the largest mercantile houses in New York who married into one of the richest families in the United States. He has been abroad for some time past, but has been where he could keep in touch with what was going on in New York through the foreign newspapers. A few days ago he noticed in the papers that an attempt was being made to corner Northern Pacific and that the price of the stock had gone kiting. He had 4,000 shares and concluded to sell at once. Accordingly he cabled to his New York brokers to sell him out at the market. They tried to execute the order when the stock was up around 400 or 500. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were ready to take the stock, but the brokers had no power of attorney under which the stock could be transferred. Although the responsibility of the brokers to their principal was not doubted for a moment, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were taking no chances in those times, therefore the stock was not sold, and the owner lost not far from $1,000,000 profit, says the New York Sun.

When the world was being combed for the stock in the days immediately preceding the panic, it was learned that a certain fashionable New York dowager was the possessor of something like 400 shares. The stock was bought years ago by her late husband, when a bushel of shares could be obtained for a song, and not much of a song at that. The other evening a broker called up the woman's residence on the telephone. He learned that she was at a dinner party and got the name of her hostess on the plea of highly important business. The hostess had a telephone, and the broker finally succeeded in getting the dowager to it. He told her that her stock was wanted, that she could realize a small fortune by selling and asked if he might sell the stock. The reply he got was:

"This is the greatest piece of impertinence I have ever heard of. You have actually called me from a dinner party to discuss a matter of business. Please be good enough never to annoy me like this again."

Then she hung up the receiver, and the broker as he hung up his said to himself what he wouldn't say to a lady. He seemed to have a very definite idea of a locality where she might spend the summer for all he cared. Later he had the satisfaction of knowing that the dowager regretted more than she will ever be able to tell that she didn't sell the stock.

A few weeks ago a yachtsman known almost as well on the other side of the ocean as on this was advised to buy United States Steel common. "All right," said he to the man who gave the advice. "I'll buy it when it can be bought at 25. I'd like some at that price, and you can take my order now for 500 shares to be executed when you can buy the stock at that figure."

The stock was then selling around 50, and the broker laughed at the order, but said he would execute it if he ever got the chance. Shortly before noon on Thursday 1,800 shares of United States Steel common were sold at 25, and 500 of those shares were bought for the yachtsman.

Sweet Pea Day at Buffalo.

Progress in variation has been remarkable with the sweet pea. The Pan-American exposition is taking a hand in helping it along, says Meehan's Monthly. A special exhibit under various classes is to be held on the opening day, July 20, and specimens be in place not later than noon on the opening day.

A Useful Pipe.

A Frenchman has invented a tobacco pipe which has a whistle in the stem in order to enable the smoker to summon a cab without taking the pipe from his mouth.

DRESS AND FASSION

THE DAY OF THE HORSE AND THE HORSEWOMAN HAS COME AGAIN.

Present Fashions In Habits, Including Those of Little Folk—The Hat and the Coiffure—Summer Modifications of the Styles.

Did anybody remark that the horse has had his day? Of course the horse really has had his day. In fact, he's had several kinds of day, and the latest one, thanks to the bicycle, was a day off. Just at present, however, the horse has jumped back into fashion again. He is simply getting there with both feet and both pairs of feet.

It is a fact that there are shoals of men, women, children and girls riding this spring. The girls are mentioned separately because there are so many of them and because they catch and hold the eye more than any other variety of equestrian. Sometimes, alas, the spectator's eye seems to be about the only thing they do catch and hold, says the New York Sun in pleasant preface to some very practical information and sketches apropos of the new fashion.

Here are the rules and regulations for the riding habit, feminine gender, present tense and grown up person: The hat is a round crowned black derby, with a rubber going under the hair in the back. The doing up of the hair, by the way, is one of the most vital problems to the woman rider. Pompadours and artistic disorder are out of the question. Five minutes' riding will make a girl who goes in for artistic disorder in hairdressing look like a Yorkshire terrier.

Middle aged women do their hair in a knot at the back of their head, anchoring this knot by means of kinky hairpins. But younger women revert to their girlhood days, braid their hair in a tail, turn it up and tie it with a ribbon bow at the nape of the neck.

The riding habit which seems to be most satisfactory to the experienced horsewoman is of black cheviot. The skirt is made of the length which has now superseded the old flowing death traps. It buttons all the way up from hem to band with safety buttons, so that if the rider is thrown or the saddle turns and the skirt catches these buttons rip open and let her fall free instead of being dragged.

The once popular basque with the postilion back is absolutely out of style now. The proper thing is what is called the English coat. This is cut straight around, rather full in the skirts, which vary in length from 6 or 8 to 12 or 14 inches. With this coat is worn a white stock and ascot with a horsy pin.

Young girls and even young women are permitted to wear a norfolk jacket. For girls of, say, 12 to 16 the norfolk is quite the proper thing. Girls of this age, too, may wear colored habits, mixed gray and black or blue. The real little girls wear their soft felt hats set on the back of their heads and with the rubber under their chins. They put on a full skirt, weighted, of course, but not cut in any of the eccentric geometrical angles necessary for the grown up habits.

Gloves are of heavy dark brown dogskin, with welt seams. Crops and whips are about equally in favor.

For warm weather riding, shirt waists and straw hats are perfectly admissible. There are women, however, who don't like to ride in a shirt waist, and they are advised to try heavy linen habits, made exactly like one of cloth. These habits are unlined and are not starched when done up. They are ironed when wet.

The really swell girl who rides at the academy considers the appearance she must make in transit, so to speak, as well as when she is actually riding. That is to say, she wants to have the proper coat to wear on the street. The long raglans or variations of raglans have been a godsend to her this season.

COACHING IN FAVOR

REMARKABLE REVIVAL OF THIS SPIRITED SPORT IS IN PROGRESS.

Country Around New York, Owing to Its Good Roads, the Coacher's Paradise — European Coaching Trips Now Possible.

In spite of the threatened extinction of the horse through the introduction of the automobile, the ancient and honorable sport of coaching is holding its own among those who have the time and money to indulge in it. There seems to be something that makes a peculiar appeal to the human heart in the spectacle of a great, finely decorated coach drawn by a number of spirited, swift horses and driven by a man who knows the delicate art of handling the reins. Very frequently, too, of recent years "society" women have shown that underneath the fair tinted skin of their hands and wrists lay muscles possessing sufficient power to hold the ribbons over the backs of four or even more powerful steeds. Besides affording joy to the spectators, the exhilaration of one's first ride on top of a swiftly moving coach is an experience never to be forgotten. No; coaching is not "going out," and it probably never will as long as men and women continue to love the horse and the ride over good roads on top of a coach.

Of course coaching can be indulged in only where there are good roads, and therefore those interested in it are to be found among the most ardent supporters of the good roads movement. The paradise of coachers in America is New York. Stretching to the north and northeast of the eastern metropolis are a number of splendid hard macadam highways that are especially suited to coaching. Up into Westchester county to the pretty towns along the Hudson is a favorite route. All along the eastern bank of the river, amid beautiful scenery, are located the summer homes of many millionaires, while country clubs abound. Another well liked coaching trip is along the roads leading beside Lond Island sound to Larchmont, Pelham, New Rochelle, etc. Coaching in other sections of the country than that around New York, owing possibly to the reprehensible condition of many of our highways, has not made much headway. When the roads receive their much needed improvement, undoubtedly society in other cities will follow the lead of New York.

A favorite little trip of New York's coaching parties these days is that to the Morris park race course, which is situated in the upper part of the city. On race days the inclosure for carriages and coaches presents a pretty scene, the brilliant toilets of the ladies lending to it color and animation. Coaching parties to the race track and elsewhere have been more popular this season than for some time.

That not alone "society," but the general public as well, is interested in coaching was shown at the recent parade of the Coaching club of New York. Seven handsome four-in-hands drawn by magnificent horses were in line, and they passed through a solid mass of admiring people as they were driven through Central park. This was the first coaching parade for five years and was led by Colonel William Jay, the president of the Coaching club. After the procession Colonel Jay said that it was as successful a parade in point of enthusiasm as the club had ever held.

To meet the demand for a resting place for New York's coaching parties Colonel John Jacob Astor is about to erect a beautiful inn at the junction of Pelham parkway and Williamsbridge road, a few miles out of the crowded part of the city. The new structure, which is to cost $200,000, will be a beautiful building, supplied with the latest improvements.

Not satisfied with coaching in America, enthusiastic followers of the sport are now arranging coaching trips on the other side of the Atlantic. The organization of an international coaching company has recently made it possible for an American going to Europe to order six months in advance the coach in which he wishes to travel between any two points in his journey. It is indeed possible now to arrange an entire trip by coach and to follow it out with absolute certainty. The ultimate end of the new enterprise is the establishment of a series of coaches to carry American tourists from one end of Europe to the other. Preparation of all the details of the trip may be made in advance, even to the ordering of luncheon to be ready on a certain day six months ahead.

GONE TO THE VERGE.

He Thought He Had Reached Friendship's Limit.

This young man is not so confiding as he was, and his ideas of friendship are not so exalted. Yet he takes it philosophically and is willing to place a heavy credit in favor of experience.

"I started in a small way," he tells, "and I had an idea that my business would expand rapidly. But I find a good many leaks and drains. Of course you know Jones. He is my friend and knows about horses. So when my one horse went lame I consulted him as being the one friend I had who, I thought, could help me out.

"'Pretty bad shape,' he said as he looked the nag over. 'Need him on your delivery wagon, don't you?'

"I need him or some other horse and asked Jones what I could get for the lame one. He looked him over, felt his legs, examined his eyes and teeth and finally said that, being a friend of mine, he'd give me $40 for the horse. I took it. That same afternoon he sold the horse for $80, a fact I learned about a week later.

"'Now,' said Jones, 'I'm not the man to leave a friend in a scrape. I'll just rustle around and find you another horse.'

"'Thank you, but keep within a hundred. I can't afford to pay more.'

"Next morning my friend showed up with a horse he told me I could have for $98, though he was really worth more. He was sound, gentle, 7 years old, according to Jones.

"He had bought that horse for $60. He had spavin and ringbone, was knee sprung and 13 years old. So Jones had made $78 off me and left me with one of the worst old crowbaits you ever saw. I'm not saying much about it, for Jones is my friend, you know. But an old codger that buys groceries from me says friendship ceases in a horse dicker."—Detroit Free Press.

The Redcoats.

An incident at the siege of Rouen, in 1591, shows that red was looked upon as the English color, for in mentioning the death of one of the Earl of Essex's captains it is remarked that the Frenchman who shot him got near enough to do so by putting on the red coat of a dead English soldier. In 1643 the king's life guards, as also the queen's and Prince Rupert's, wore red coats.

It Brings Her, Etc.

"What do you do when your wife gets sulky and refuses to talk to you?"

"Why, I begin to praise Mrs. Allgood, across the street, or some other woman I know she detests."

"And that brings her, eh?"

"Yes, it brings her and sometimes everything throwable that happens to be in her reach too."—Salt Lake City Tribune.

LESS DEALINGS IN STOCKS.

Some Stocks Showed Strength, but the Tendency Generally Was Reactionary.

New York, June 7.—It developed Thursday, from the smaller volume of the dealings and the lack of support for prices, that Wednesday's operations had resulted in the elimination of a large short interest and that the demand from this source to cover short contracts had been taken advantage of by the bull contingent to realize profits on heavy long lines of stocks. This mutual closing up of accounts had a decided effect on the speculative appetite, and the ushering in of the hot season accentuated the indifference of the trading. There were rumors current all day that the covering by the bears Wednesday had been achieved at considerable cost, and more or less uneasiness was caused by this fact. The emphatic denials from official sources of a number of the rumors which have played a part in the recent bull movement, especially those bearing on consolidations and absorptions of many of the minor railroad systems, was a somewhat depressing factor. An influence in the same direction was the disclaimer, on the part of parties interested, of the assumption that the entrance to the Atchison directory of a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. was an indication of Morgan holdings of the stock with a view of establishment of community of interest. The net changes in stocks give no adequate idea of the extent of the day's price ranges. There was a considerable show of strength at the opening, partly due to the influence of London on account of operations by a coterie of Americans now in London. The selling pressure, however, made an end of the advances before the end of the first hour. The feverish tone of Rock Island was a somewhat unsettling influence, owing to fears that a corner may develop in that stock. There were a few points of positive strength, which, however, had only slight influence in offsetting the general reactionary tendency. The various tobacco companies were most prominent and advanced on the incorporation of the new company in New Jersey, which is believed to be for the purpose of taking over and combining an ever present company. American Tobacco rose an extreme 1¾, Continental Tobacca 2¾, the preferred 5⅜ and American Snuff 4¾. Louisville and Nashville was consistenly strong on the ground of its comparative low price and large earnings and advanced 2⅛. Missouri Pacific rose at one time 2¼, believed to be on account of progress in the greater Missouri Pacific project. In the drop, after the opening, the grangers, Pacifics, Southwesterns and New York public utilities suffered most severely, St. Paul losing 4, the preferred 4½ and others in the group from 2 to 3 points. Declines of one to two points were fairly general in the active list. There was a good rally, but prices ran off again at the weak closing, almost to the lowest in some cases.

HOME AFFAIRS.

Brief Notes of a Personal Nature And of Matters About Town.

Camp Meeting—The A. M. E. church will hold a camp meeting at Columbian park, July 14 to 21.

Hard at It—Six teams were put to work yesterday morning by Contractor McLaughlin, grading the West End ball ground.

Pensions Granted—Among pensions recently granted are: James H. Hemphill, East Liverpool, $8; Peter Davis, Lisbon, $7.

Entertained the Belmont — The young ladies of the high school delightfully entertained the Belmont club boys at Rock Springs yesterday afternoon.

Twelve Feet And Falling — The marks at the wharf this morning registered 12 feet and falling. The Greenwood and Lorena passed up and the Ben Hur down last night and the Virginia will go up tonight. The Enterprise passed down yesterday with a tow.

George Must Pay Costs—Justice McLane has decided that John A. George must pay the costs of his case with the city. The law on the subject clearly defines the reasons by which Mr. George should be held for the costs, and the squire is acting in accordance with the statutes.

Coming Home Improved—Miss Hattie Woodburn, who was injured several years ago by falling into a coal hole on Walnut street, and who has been undergoing treatment in the West Penn hospital at Pittsburg, will be brought to her home in this city tomorrow. She is very much improved.

Asleep on Railroad—A Wellsville man, whose name could not be learned, was found asleep on the tracks of the C. & P. railroad just below the flint mill, last evening, by a party of workmen. The man was badly intoxicated and sat down on the ties to rest himself when he fell asleep. He was placed on a street car and sent home.

Sent to Rusticate—The cow which has been causing so much complaint on Calcutta road has been disposed of. Mrs. Gotham, its owner, still insisted that it was not a nuisance, and that it did nothing more terrible than bawl occasionally, which was quite natural for a cow to do. However, since there had been so many complaints, she concluded to send the animal to the country to board.

Recovered Through Good Nursing—Edward Madow, who has been very ill with fever at the Washington house for several days, is able to be about. The gentleman is a lineman, and has been employed here for the past year. He was nursed during his illness by a number of his companions, to whom the credit is due for his recovery. The young man was in a critical condition for several days.

SOLDIERS FOUGHT HIM

Tried to Rob Paymaster Arthur's Strong Box, In the Phillipines.

OFFICER DIED IN CLEVELAND.

Believed He Succumbed as Result of a Wound, Received During the Struggle—Had Typhoid Malaria After the Incident.

Cleveland, June 7.—Major George Arthur, assistant paymaster in the United States army and son of P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Eengineers, was stricken with death while sitting in a chair in the lobby of the Weddell house.

An autopsy developed the fact that death had resulted from a ruptured blood vessel on the left side of the head. A large blood clot was formed just behind the ear. It is believed that Major Arthur, while defending the government treasure box in a fight with drunken soldiers last fall in the Philippines, received a blow on the head that ruptured the blood vessel and eventually led to his death.

After his injury he was stricken with typhoid malaria fever, which reduced his weight from 170 to 130 pounds. When he arrived home a month ago he had not recovered his health. He was still weak and often complained of a pain in his chest. Major Arthur was 43 years of age.

PEOPLE'S CHURCH OF AMERICA.

Incorporated to Further Expand Present Organization.

Chicago, June 7.—Articles of incorporation for the People's Church of America were granted at Springfield, this action being taken to extend the scope of the People's Church of Chicago into a national organization. The Chicago church, under the direction of Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas, will be the parent body, and will have limited jurisdiction over congregations at other points.

The first new branches are proposed for Duluth, Minn., and for the Black Hills region in South Dakota. Branches already exist in Milwaukee and elsewhere.

AFTER A NEGRO FIEND.

Farmers Hunt Man Who Carried Girl Into Woods.

St. Joseph, Mo., June 7.—Two hundred infuriated farmers were scouring the timber 20 miles northeast of this city in an effort to capture an unknown negro, who waylaid the 14-year-old daughter of George Dixon, a farmer, bound and gagged her and carried her into the woods. Other school children spread the alarm and farmers were soon in pursuit. The negro became alarmed and fled.

Townley Sentenced to Dismissal.

Washington, June 7.—News has been received here through unofficial channels that Lieutenant Richard H. Townley, of the navy, has been convicted by court martial at Manila and sentenced to dismissal from the service. The charge on which Lieutenant Townley was court martialed was in connection with the recent commissary irregularities at Manila. The sentence must be approved by the president to become effective.

Girl Accidentally Kills Lover.

Fair Haven, O., June 7.—Curtis Roberts, superintendent of schools, of Fair Haven, was accidentally killed while at target practice. With his sweetheart, Mary Alferton, and a party of young people, Roberts had gone into the woods to practice with a target revolver. Miss Alferton fired the first shot, and the ball, striking the side of a stump, bounded off and struck Roberts in the side, inflicting a wound from which he died in a few hours.

Ohio Sunday School Officers.

Chillicothe, O., June 7.—The state Sunday school convention elected the following officers: President, Dr. W. O. Thompson, State university, Columbus; vice president, Rev. C. E. Miller, Dayton; general secretary, Rev. Joseph Clark, Columbus; recording secretary, Ed L. Young, Norwalk; treasurer, E. L. Barrett, Springfield. Findlay was chosen as the place for holding the next convention

Farmers Caught Horse Thieves.

Upper Sandusky, O., June 7.—Thirty farmers in the eastern part of Wyandot county had a running fight with three horse thieves. They were captured a few miles south of here after a chase of nearly 25 miles. Several shots were fired. The thieves are now confined in jail, where they gave their names as George, Cliffe and Mell Geiser.

Hanna a G. A. R. Colonel.

Cleveland, June 7.—Senator M. A. Hanna has been appointed a colonel on the official staff of General Rassieur, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. Senator Hanna was recently mustered into the G. A. R. as a member of Memorial post in this city.

Preacher to Go to Philippines.

Toledo, O., June 7.—Rev. Chester D. Clapp, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, has been appointed to take charge of the work in the Philippines for the American board of missions. He will begin his work about Sept. 1.

Snow in North Dakota.

Jamestown, N. D., June 7.—Snow fell heavily throughout the central and northern portions of North Dakota.

WILL THEY BE RUSHED?

New Traction Ordinances Were Asserted Under Preparation In Pittsburg Councils.

Pittsburg, June 7.—Ordinances are being prepared for introduction in councils Monday providing for the granting of the street franchises needed by the new company or companies which are preparing to secure the benefits in Pittsburg of the Focht and Emery bills just passed by the general assembly. Those interested in the new projects for Pittsburg are averse to making public their plans or the names of all the streets over which they expect to run lines until they secure their charters at Harrisburg today.

Enough has been revealed to indicate that there are many millions ready for investment in the new overhead and underground lines planned to be operated with present and to-be-built surface lines. While Thomas S. Bigelow, J. N. Pew, Henry W. and George T. Oliver, R. R. Quay and W. L. Mellon are generally credited with being those most interested in the new enterprise so far as Pitsburg is concerned, they also have associated with them other men who have been in the past prominent in traction affairs, and who, like those mentioned, consider one of the first requisites for success in their project to be the prevention of possible rivals from acquiring full knowledge of their plans.

It was stated yesterday that the hearty support of the city administration and those powerful in councils has been secured for the proposed ordinances, and that more than that required by compliance with the ordinary rules of procedure will be experienced in securing the needed municipal legislation.

PRESIDENT HOPEFUL.

RIXEY LAST NIGHT WOULDN'T SAY MRS. M'KINLEY GAINED.

The Sick Lady Rested Better Yesterday and Was Resting Fairly Last Night.

Washington, June 7.—Dr. Rixey left the white house about 10 o'clock last night, after an hour and a half spent in attendance on Mrs. McKinley. He said: "There is no material change in Mrs. McKinley's condition. She remainst the same as mentioned in our bulletin of this morning."

In answer to specific inquiries, he replied that he could not say there had been any perceptible improvement whatever during the day.

The president last night continued hopeful of the outcome. More than this cannot be said. There had been no setback during the day, but likewise no gain. One favorable circumstance is that Mrs. McKinley continued to gain more sleep than she was able to get in the earlier stages of her illness, and last night was resting fairly comfortably.

The president yesterday, through Secretary Cortelyou, formally notified the Buffalo exposition management that he would not be able to attend the exposition on the 13th inst., as had been planned, but added that he hoped to be able to do so at some later date that may be designated.

Drs. Rixey, Sternberg and Johnston were in consultation at the white house Thursday morning. After their departure Secretary Cortelyou gave out the following statement:

"Mrs. McKinley's physicians report that she has passed a comfortable night and continues to show slight improvement."

Mrs. McKinley arose refreshed Thursday and was brighter than usual during her present illness. Her physicians were allowing her a little coffee and beef tea in addition to the diet of white of eggs and spirits, upon which she had been kept heretofore.

WILL IGNORE THE INTERVIEW.

State Department So Decides as to Castro's Attack on Loomis.

Washington, June 7.—The state department decided that the alleged interview with President Castro, of Venezuela, in which he was made to make grave insinuations against Minister Francis B. Loomis, would be ignored by the United States government.

The first impulse of Secretary Hay was to call upon Castro for information as to the accuracy of his reported utterances and if he did not deny them to recall our charge d'affaires, Mr. Russell. Upon reflection, however, this plan was not believed to be wise, for the reason that American interests in Venezuela would be left at the mercy of the elements in that country hostile to them.

Therefore, an incident which in the case of a larger nation might not have been closed without a war, is prevented from becoming serious simply by being ignored by this government.

THIRTY-SEVEN BOERS KILLED.

Made Stubborn Fight, but Fled—Left Some Supplies.

Pretoria, June 7.—Colonel Wilson, with about 240 of Kitchener's scouts, surprised and routed about 400 Boers belonging to Beyer's command, about 34 miles west of Warm Baths. The Boers resisted stubbornly, but finally broke and fled, leaving 37 dead, a hundred prisoners and all their wagons and supplies, including about 8,000 cattle, in the hands of the British. The loss of the British was three men killed and 15 wounded.

Beyer's main command arrived on the scene soon after the engagement, but failed in an attempt to recapture the supplies. Beyer was thus left practically without any transport or supplies.

Actor Attempted Suicide.

Cleveland, June 7.—Horace Pell, a member of the stock company which is playing at the Euclid avenue opera house, attempted suicide by shooting himself in the right side. Very little home is entertained for his recovery.

A PERSEVERING MONKEY.

Professor Garner's Story of Nellie and the Matchbox.

Monkeys are always happy if they have plenty to eat and something to play with. Professor R. L. Garner, in his "Apes and Monkeys," says that he recalls no investment which ever yielded a greater return in pleasure than a certain little pocket match safe, which cost 25 cents. He gave it to a little monkey, Nellie by name, after putting into it a small key to make it rattle and some bits of candy.

She rattled the box and found much pleasure in the noise. I showed her how to press the spring in order to open the box, but her little black fingers were not strong enough to release the spring.

However, she caught the idea and knew that the spring was the secret which held the box closed. When she found that she could not open it with her fingers, she tried it with her teeth. Failing in this, she turned to the wall, and, standing upright on the top of her cage, she took the box in both hands and struck the spring against the wall until the lid flew open.

She was perfectly delighted at the result, and for the hundredth time at least I closed the box for her to open it again.

The next time Nellie received the match safe she was in her cage, and through its meshes she could not reach the wall. She had nothing against which to strike the spring to force it open.

After looking around and striking the box several times against the wires of the cage, she discovered a block of wood about six inches square. She took this and mounted her perch. Balancing the block on the perch, she held it with the left foot, while with the right foot she clung to the perch. With her tail wound around the meshes of the cage to steady herself, she carefully adjusted the matchbox in such a manner as to protect her fingers from the blow. Then she struck the spring against the block of wood, and the lid flew open.

She fairly screamed with delight as she held up the box.

CAME IN TO BE HANGED.

A Story Told of Abel Erasmus, the Boer, and Lord Wolseley.

A good story is told of the old Boer, Abel Erasmus, and Lord Wolseley, then Sir Garnet Wolseley, in connection with the part Erasmus took in Wolseley's campaign in 1879 against Sekukuni, the chief of the Bapedis, on the borders of Swaziland. After the capture of Sekukuni he was immediately brought before Sir Garnet Wolseley, who asked him how he, a miserable Kaffir, living in a cave, dared to defy the great queen of England. The chief replied that he had been instigated to do so by Abel Erasmus.

Sir Garnet in describing the scene at a public dinner given to him at Pretoria on his return from the campaign said that he wished there and then to let Abel Erasmus know that if ever he found that Erasmus had been inciting any chief to levy war against England and he was able to lay hands on him Abel Erasmus would hang as high as Haman.

A few days after the dinner Sir Henry Brackenbury, Sir Garnet's military secretary, was sitting in his office when a tall, bearded Boer entered and asked permission to speak with him.

"I am Abel Erasmus," he said, "and I have very important business to do here."

He explained that he had come to see Sir Garnet Wolseley, for he had heard that Sir Garnet had said that if he could lay hold of him he would hang him, and so he had come to be hanged. Sir Garnet was in the next room, and Sir Henry Brackenbury thought it would be advisable to consult him on the subject. Sir Garnet, however, happened to be too busy at the moment to see anybody, and Sir Henry after reflection persuaded his angry visitor to take his leave and allow the hanging to stand over for the time.

An Aldermanic Bull.

Some time ago a follower of one of the city aldermen cast covetous glances upon a desirable newsstand under the elevated railroad stairs. Straight he went to his friend, the alderman, and made known his wishes, which were that the news dealer should be evicted from the locality.

"All right, me boy; leave it to me," said the city father and began to pull wires. Finally he got an order directing the newsdealer to show cause why he should not get out, but that obstinate individual still remained. Then he drew up a formal complaint, which was duly laid before one of the judges. The complaint, after telling how the newsdealer had been ordered to leave and had not done so, concludes:

"And now we have to complain, your honor, that not only is this same stand still there, but the defendant has replaced it by a bigger one."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Found the House.

The late Sir Frederick Gore-Ouseley, professor of music at Oxford, was once going to call on a friend in London and asked a fellow musician the number in which he lived in a certain street.

"I don't know his number," answered the other, "but the note of his door scraper is C sharp."

Sir Frederick went off, contentedly kicking the door scrapers all down the street until he came to the right one, when he rang the bell and went in.—London Standard.

SOLDIERSFOUGHTHIM

Tried to Rob Paymaster Arthur's Strong Box, In the Phillipines.

OFFICER DIED IN CLEVELAND.

Believed He Succumbed as Result of a Wound, Received During the Struggle—Had Typhoid Malaria After the Incident.

Cleveland, June 7.—Major George Arthur, assistant paymaster in the United States army and son of P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Eengineers, was stricken with death while sitting in a chair in the lobby of the Weddell house.

An autopsy developed the fact that death had resulted from a ruptured blood vessel on the left side of the head. A large blood clot was formed just behind the ear. It is believed that Major Arthur, while defending the government treasure box in a fight with drunken soldiers last fall in the Philippines, received a blow on the head that ruptured the blood vessel and eventually led to his death.

After his injury he was stricken with typhoid malaria fever, which reduced his weight from 170 to 130 pounds. When he arrived home a month ago he had not recovered his health. He was still weak and often complained of a pain in his chest. Major Arthur was 43 years of age.

Other school children spread the alarm and farmers were soon in pursuit. The negro became alarmed and fled.

WILL THEY BE RUSHED?

New Traction Ordinances Were Asserted Under Preparation In Pittsburg Councils.

Pittsburg, June 7.—Ordinances are being prepared for introduction in councils Monday providing for the granting of the street franchises needed by the new company or companies which are preparing to secure the benefits in Pittsburg of the Focht and Emery bills just passed by the general assembly. Those interested in the new projects for Pittsburg are averse to making public their plans or the names of all the streets over which they expect to run lines until they secure their charters at Harrisburg today.

Enough has been revealed to indicate that there are many millions ready for investment in the new overhead and underground lines planned to be operated with present and to-be-built surface lines. While Thomas S. Bigelow, J. N. Pew, Henry W. and George T. Oliver, R. R. Quay and W. L. Mellon are generally credited with being those most interested in the new enterprise so far as Pitsburg is concerned, they also have associated with them other men who have been in the past prominent in traction affairs, and who, like those mentioned, consider one of the first requisites for success in their project to be the prevention of possible rivals from acquiring full knowledge of their plans.

It was stated yesterday that the hearty support of the city administration and those powerful in councils has been secured for the proposed ordinances, and that more than that required by compliance with the ordinary rules of procedure will be experienced in securing the needed municipal legislation.

PRESIDENT HOPEFUL.

RIXEY LAST NIGHT WOULDN'T SAY MRS. M'KINLEY GAINED.

The Sick Lady Rested Better Yesterday and Was Resting Fairly Last Night.

Washington, June 7.—Dr. Rixey left the white house about 10 o'clock last night, after an hour and a half spent in attendance on Mrs. McKinley. He said: "There is no material change in Mrs. McKinley's condition. She remainst the same as mentioned in our bulletin of this morning."

In answer to specific inquiries, he replied that he could not say there had been any perceptible improvement whatever during the day.

The president last night continued hopeful of the outcome. More than this cannot be said. There had been no setback during the day, but likewise no gain. One favorable circumstance is that Mrs. McKinley continued to gain more sleep than she was able to get in the earlier stages of her illness, and last night was resting fairly comfortably.

The president yesterday, through Secretary Cortelyou, formally notified the Buffalo exposition management that he would not be able to attend the exposition on the 13th inst., as had been planned, but added that he hoped to be able to do so at some later date that may be designated.

Drs. Rixey, Sternberg and Johnston were in consultation at the white house Thursday morning. After their departure Secretary Cortelyou gave out the following statement:

"Mrs. McKinley's physicians report that she has passed a comfortable night and continues to show slight improvement."

Mrs. McKinley arose refreshed Thursday and was brighter than usual during her present illness. Her physicians were allowing her a little coffee and beef tea in addition to the diet of white of eggs and spirits, upon which she had been kept heretofore.

WILL IGNORE THE INTERVIEW.

State Department So Decides as to Castro's Attack on Loomis.

Washington, June 7.—The state department decided that the alleged interview with President Castro, of Venezuela, in which he was made to make grave insinuations against Minister Francis B. Loomis, would be ignored by the United States government.

The first impulse of Secretary Hay was to call upon Castro for information as to the accuracy of his reported utterances and if he did not deny them to recall our charge d'affaires, Mr. Russell. Upon reflection, however, this plan was not believed to be wise, for the reason that American interests in Venezuela would be left at the mercy of the elements in that country hostile to them.

Therefore, an incident which in the case of a larger nation might not have been closed without a war, is prevented from becoming serious simply by being ignored by this government.

THIRTY-SEVEN BOERS KILLED.

Pretoria, June 7.—Colonel Wilson, with about 240 of Kitchener's scouts, surprised and routed about 400 Boers belonging to Beyer's command, about 34 miles west of Warm Baths. The Boers resisted stubbornly, but finally broke and fled, leaving 37 dead, a hundred prisoners and all their wagons and supplies, including about 8,000 cattle, in the hands of the British. The loss of the British was three men killed and 15 wounded.

Beyer's main command arrived on the scene soon after the engagement, but failed in an attempt to recapture the supplies. Beyer was thus left practically without any transport or supplies.

Actor Attempted Suicide.

Cleveland, June 7.—Horace Pell, a member of the stock company which is playing at the Euclid avenue opera house, attempted suicide by shooting himself in the right side. Very little home is entertained for his recovery.

CHAPTER I.

A TRYING SITUATION.

I looked at the prisoner, and I was vexed by doubt. With a battle on one side of him and a woman on the other what is a man to do? She returned my gaze with great, pure eyes, which seemed to say I was a villain, a monster, yet I had been doing my exact duty, that of a faithful soldier in the cause of the Continental congress and freedom, while she, a woman, a girl, had presumed to turn from the things for which God had intended her and to meddle with war. I was more than vexed—I was angry, angry at her for attempting such a task and angry at myself for being forced into a situation so full of troubles.

On the right, in the fringe of woods a quarter of a mile away, the last rifle shot had been fired, and its echo was speeding across the far hills. The powder flashed no more, and the smoke rose in lazy coils over the ground on which men had fought and some had died. The victors, the captured detail with them, were riding away. I almost fancied I could hear the beat of their horses' hoofs, and the dead, I knew, lay with their faces upturned to the sun, waiting there until the last trump called to them to rise again. And here was I, an atom, left in the drift of the armies, cut off from my comrades and alone with this girl.

The horses shifted about uneasily, stamped their feet, and once mine raised his head and neighed, as if in truth he heard the beating hoofs of the galloping detachment. He knew that his comrades, too, were leaving him, though I cannot say that it was a desertion intended by either horse or man.

The girl's look of reproach turned to one of inquiry. She sat on a log, her little riding whip hanging idly in her hand. For the first time I took note of her face—the delicate but firm molding of each feature; the clear depths of her dark, blue eyes; the bronze gold of her hair, clustering in tiny curls around her forehead; the rose red of her cheeks, like a flush; her lithe, strong, young figure. Why is it that when God wishes to make women especially wicked and troublesome he makes them beautiful?

"Well, you rebel," she said, "when do you purpose to set me free?"

"When you give your word of honor that you will tell Cornwallis nothing about the strength of Morgan's forces and our present movements."

"That I will not do."

"Then you remain my prisoner."

Yet I would have been a fool even to have taken her word of honor. What woman has any regard for the truth in military matters? If she could find a chance, she would certainly give information that would bring Cornwallis, as well as Tarleton, on Morgan.

"I think that it is enough for Englishmen themselves to fight us without sending their daughters also against us," I said.

"My father did not send me," she said quickly. "I came of my own accord."

"So much the worse," I replied.

But nothing was to be gained by standing there and talking. Besides, it is never well for a soldier to dispute with his prisoner. It argues an insufficiency for his position. A captor should bear himself with dignity and reserve. I would show my quality.

I untied the horses and led them to the log on which she was sitting.

"Get up!" I said curtly and in a tone of command.

The natural rose flush of her cheeks deepened a little.

"You speak as if you were my master," she said.

"That is just what I am—for the present," I replied. "Mount your horse at once."

She gave me a sidewise look from eyes that flashed, but she stood upon the log.

"This log is too low, and the saddle is too high," she said.

I stepped forward and held out my hand to assist her.

"Don't touch me, you rebel!" she cried and leaped lightly into the saddle.

I felt hurt.

"I wish you wouldn't call me a rebel," I said.

"Why?"

"It's impolite."

"But it's true."

"Well, perhaps it is in a way, and in a way, too, I am proud of it. Are you proud of your king?"

"Yes."

"It doesn't take much to arouse English pride."

"You will think more of him when the war is over. It will pay you to do so."

"Meanwhile we will wait until then."

"What do you purpose to do with me—keep me a prisoner?"

"It is my misfortune."

"The courtesy of a rebel."

"I shall take you to General Morgan."

"Then Tarleton will rescue me. Your Morgan cannot stand before him."

I was afraid that she spoke the truth. We were outnumbered, and besides more than half our force was raw militia. The odds were great against us, and knowing it I did not reply to her taunt.

While we were talking she sat in the saddle with the easy seat of a good horsewoman. I held my horse loosely by the bridle. She was twiddling the whip in her hands. Suddenly she leaned over and lashed my horse across the eyes with her whip. The blow was given with all her might, and the startled horse reared, jerked the bridle out of my hand and ran away.

"Goodby, Mr. Rebel!" she shouted, and drawing her whip across her own horse galloped off in the opposite direction.

I believe I swore. I was angry and alarmed, too, for this girl, with her messages and accurate news about us, was a formidable enemy, escaped, and might cause the destruction of the entire army of the south and the loss of all the southern colonies. I drew a pistol, it being my idea to kill the horse, but it was a shot that I could not risk. I thrust the pistol back in my pocket and ran after my horse. He was 30 or 40 yards away, half mad with rage and pain, his bridle swinging beside him.

I am a very good runner, but I do not claim to be as swift as a horse. Nevertheless I made speed as I ran after him, and I whistled and shouted with a vigor that must have convinced him of my intentions. I looked back once, and the girl and the horse she rode were growing smaller as they sped over the desolate and unfenced fields. My need of a horse, too, was growing more pressing. Mounted, there was hope; afoot, there was none.

I whistled all the calls that a friendly and well treated horse should know and meantime did not neglect to run after him with the best speed that I could command. Presently he seemed to understand and to remember that I was not responsible for the blow. He slackened his pace, looked back over his shoulder at me and whinnied. I whistled encouragingly, he whinnied again, and, remembering who I was, his best friend, came to a full stop, for he was a most intelligent horse. In a half a minute I overtook him, leaped into the saddle and turned his head the other way.

"Now, old horse," I cried, "you can gallop, but you gallop my way."

I wore my spurs, and I gave him a touch of the steel. That was enough, for he was always ambitious and proud of his speed, and away we flew over the fields after the disappearing girl. She was a full quarter of a mile away, and her figure was growing dim on the horizon. Another quarter of a mile and she would be in the woods, where the concealment of the trees would enable her to elude my pursuit. Moreover, these English girls are often daring horsewomen, and even at the distance I could see that she rode like a trooper. But I knew the country, and she did not, and I hoped to secure from it some chance that would enable me to overtake her.

I encouraged my horse. I did more than encourage—I appealed to his pride and his sense of gratitude. I reminded him how I had ridden him all the way from the Hudson when I came south with Greene; how I had tended him and cared for him and fed him, often when I was compelled to go hungry myself. I appealed to him now not to let that girl escape when so much depended on her capture, when I would be eternally disgraced, and he with me, if we permitted ourselves to be tricked and outwitted at such a time by one red cheeked English girl.

He was a sensible horse, and he understood. He said nothing, not even a little snort, but his stride lengthened, and the swift and regular beat of his hoofs on the turf was music.

"Good horse, Old Put, good lad!" I said. I had named him Put after Old Put, the famous old Connecticut general, because he was so reliable and steady. He shook his ears slightly as a sign that he would do his best for me, having no time to say more, and he ran a little faster. I kept a sharp watch for stones and holes in the ground, having no mind to risk a fall which might ruin all, and nursed my comrade's strength, for on land as well as sea a stern chase is a long one.

The figure of the girl and the horse she rode was growing larger, good proof that I was gaining, which was not enough, however, for I might continue to gain, and yet she could elude me in the woods unless I was close upon her when she reached them. Her long hair had fallen down and was streaming behind her like a ribbon of spray with the sunshine on it, but I felt like giving that yellow hair a jerk just then could I have put my hands upon it.

"Steady, Put!" I said to my faithful comrade. "Do you see that girl with the yellow hair? Yes? Well, note the horse that she is riding, a common troop horse, clumsy, ill bred, no pedigree. Are you going to let yourself be beaten by him?"

His ears wagged violently, and he ran a foot to the second faster. We struck a piece of beautiful turf, evidently an old field left to itself until it could recover its fertility, and with the soft grass deadening and easing his footfalls Old Put raced for life. I could almost count the yards that we gained, and still she was not in the forest. She had not looked back until then, and it was a hasty glance, followed by a quick lashing of her mount. I judged that she, too, had noticed the gain and would now be unmerciful to her horse. I was exultant, willing to boast of it, and I shared my feelings with Old Put.

"Notice that yellow haired girl again, Put," I said. "When we catch her this time, we will take care that she does not serve us such a trick again. If we cannot trust an Englishman, Put, how on earth can we put any faith in an English woman?"

Put had received a slight slash once from the saber of an Englishman who had offered to surrender to me and then tried to back out of it, and he knew what I meant. For the first time he uttered a slight snort, called one new muscle into play, and we steadily shortened the distance between us and the girl.

She would have got into the wood a few moments later, but she abruptly reined in her horse, turned him half about and galloped off to the left. I guessed the trouble at once. The heavy rains often wash great gullies in our South Carolina soil, and a kind providence, wishing to oblige me, had placed one of these in her way. It was equal to a gain of 200 feet without an effort, and I turned Old Put at once into the course she was taking.

"Don't you see, Put," I said, "that the Lord is on our side and she and that burnt brown cob of hers that has passed most of his life hitched to a sutler's wagon will be delivered into our hands?"

Old Put fairly neighed, his first real expression of triumph. He was as sure of the victory now as I was, and I had confidence in the judgment of my old comrade.

"Stop, stop!" I shouted to the girl. "If you don't stop, I'll shoot!"

I had a long barreled horse pistol, which I had drawn and was flourishing magnificently. I was within hearing though not shooting range, and I trusted that I would be able to frighten her into yielding.

But she did not stop. She had worn her whip into shreds, and thin red streams of blood zigzagged across the horse's sides, but she pounded on with the stump. I felt a genuine pity for her horse, hack though he was, but none for her.

CHAPTER II.

KEEPING A PRISONER.

No more gullies thrust themselves across the way, and she was within 20 feet of the wood. She took another hurried look at me, and seeing my rapid gain alarm appeared on her face. She drew a little toy pistol from the cloak she wore and leveled it at me, or at least that seemed to be her intention. I call it a toy pistol, because I, a full grown soldier, would have felt deep shame had I been caught with such a weapon in my possession. She pulled the trigger, and the bullet cut the uncomplaining air somewhere, but not in my neighborhood. This bombardment cost her at least 20 feet of gain, but she thrust the terrible weapon back in her cloak and galloped on, with Old Put thundering at her heels. Then she was into the wood, and I was not far behind, shouting to her to stop; that I would surely overtake her and she was merely wasting the breath of both our horses and our own. Still she paid no heed, guiding her horse between the trees and through the bushes with considerable skill.

But, seeing the wood thicken presently, I was tempted to laugh. It was obvious now that the end of the race had come and I was the winner. The wood became so dense, the bushes clustering in thickets and the vines interlacing from tree to tree, that it formed an impenetrable wall. What I had feared would help her had been my best ally.

She stopped short and sat stiffly on her horse, her back turned to me. I wondered if she would draw out that amazing pistol again and threaten me with it, but she made no such attempt, evidently having arrived at wisdom at last. She dropped the stump of her switch on the ground and kept the back of her head toward me. Some beams of sunshine came through the tall trees and gleamed across the long curls of tawny gold, tingeing them for the moment as if with fire.

I rode up by her side, and then, as she seemed to reprove me, I asked Old Put to take me around in front of her. There I could see her face. It was pale, sad and reproachful, and a tear ran down either cheek. For the moment I felt a little pity for her despite her perverse nature and all the trouble she had given me.

"I am sorry I have to do this," I said.

"Sorry for what?" she asked.

I saw that I had made a mistake. One should always be polite to a woman, but never apologetic.

"That I had to overtake you," I said.

"Yours is the better horse," she said, wiping away the tears with an angry little brush of the hand. "I like to ride, and I always enjoy a good race. That was the reason I challenged you to it, though I did not know you had such a good horse."

This was a new view of the case, but I had a thought, or, rather, a reflection.

"It was a good race," I said, "but wasn't that a false start?"

"How so?"

"Didn't you take an advantage?"

"I was entitled to it. I am a woman."

"So women expect to carry that rule even into warfare?"

"Certainly."

I was glad that I had never been forced to wage war with a woman before and hoped never to meet the necessity again. One likes to stick to the rules in military matters, and then he has some idea what to expect.

"The horses are very tired," I said.

"They look like it," said she.

The poor animals were panting, and their coats were damp. I took the reins of her horse from her hand and held them firmly in mine.

"What are you going to do?" she asked.

"I think I'd better hold the reins of both," I said. "Will you please dismount?"

I set her a good example by jumping down myself. She could not say that the prisoner was compelled to walk while the captor rode. I stepped forward to assist her, but again she refused my help and sprang to the ground unassisted.

Old Put gazed angrily at the girl who had struck him. Then he snorted with triumph and looked contemptuously at the horse at his side. The latter seemed to be ashamed of himself, and his attitude was apologetic, but he had done his best and therefore should not have been blamed.

"Come," I said, "we will get out of this wood and walk back across the fields. Walk by my side. I will watch you, as I do not want any more treachery."

I spoke with great sternness, as the mite of pity I felt when I saw the tears had gone. She obeyed with surprising meekness and walked beside me, while I led the horses, holding both bridles in one hand. I was glad that I had been so sharp with her, and I saw now it was the proper way with rebellious women. A man has only to show toward them a stern, unyielding temper, and they submit at once. She was crushed, and again that mite of pity rose up in my breast, for nearly always we feel a trace of sympathy for those whom we have vanquished.

Her head drooped, there was a faint appeal in her eyes, and her walk showed weariness. She seemed to have forgotten that her hair was loose down her back, for she let it hang in long curls of gold, burnished where the sunshine fell upon it, dark in the shadow.

The yellow of the sun was deepening into red, a sign that the afternoon was waning, and I was anxious about the future, for which, like a good soldier, I felt it my duty to provide. She must have seen the care in my face, for she asked:

"Are you thinking how we shall reach General Morgan?"

"General Morgan or some one else."

"Is it far to his camp?"

"I cannot say. I do not know where he is. The American camp just now is of a shifting character."

"To keep out of Tarleton's way, I suppose?"

"Either that or to find him."

Then she seemed to repent of her gibe at our running away from the British.

"But General Morgan is a brave man, I have heard," she said.

That warmed my heart.

"He is a brave man," I said, "and, what is more, he is a fine soldier and general."

"What a pity he is not on the right side!"

"Let's not quarrel about that again."

I thought I could afford to be generous. My situation was so superior to hers.

After that we walked along in silence for several minutes. The red tint of the sun deepened; faint shadows appeared in the blue velvet of the sky.

"I want to ask you one question," she said presently.

"There is nothing to prevent your asking it."

"But I want an answer, direct and correct."

"If it does not interfere with the progress of the campaign."

"I don't think it will do that."

"What is it?"

"What is your name?"

I laughed. It had never occurred to me before to tell her.

CHAPTER I.

A TRYING SITUATION.

I looked at the prisoner, and I was vexed by doubt. With a battle on one side of him and a woman on the other what is a man to do? She returned my gaze with great, pure eyes, which seemed to say I was a villain, a monster, yet I had been doing my exact duty, that of a faithful soldier in the cause of the Continental congress and freedom, while she, a woman, a girl, had presumed to turn from the things for which God had intended her and to meddle with war. I was more than vexed—I was angry, angry at her for attempting such a task and angry at myself for being forced into a situation so full of troubles.

On the right, in the fringe of woods a quarter of a mile away, the last rifle shot had been fired, and its echo was speeding across the far hills. The powder flashed no more, and the smoke rose in lazy coils over the ground on which men had fought and some had died. The victors, the captured detail with them, were riding away. I almost fancied I could hear the beat of their horses' hoofs, and the dead, I knew, lay with their faces upturned to the sun, waiting there until the last trump called to them to rise again. And here was I, an atom, left in the drift of the armies, cut off from my comrades and alone with this girl.

The horses shifted about uneasily, stamped their feet, and once mine raised his head and neighed, as if in truth he heard the beating hoofs of the galloping detachment. He knew that his comrades, too, were leaving him, though I cannot say that it was a desertion intended by either horse or man.

The girl's look of reproach turned to one of inquiry. She sat on a log, her little riding whip hanging idly in her hand. For the first time I took note of her face—the delicate but firm molding of each feature; the clear depths of her dark, blue eyes; the bronze gold of her hair, clustering in tiny curls around her forehead; the rose red of her cheeks, like a flush; her lithe, strong, young figure. Why is it that when God wishes to make women especially wicked and troublesome he makes them beautiful?

"Well, you rebel," she said, "when do you purpose to set me free?"

"When you give your word of honor that you will tell Cornwallis nothing about the strength of Morgan's forces and our present movements."

"That I will not do."

"Then you remain my prisoner."

Yet I would have been a fool even to have taken her word of honor. What woman has any regard for the truth in military matters? If she could find a chance, she would certainly give information that would bring Cornwallis, as well as Tarleton, on Morgan.

"I think that it is enough for Englishmen themselves to fight us without sending their daughters also against us," I said.

"My father did not send me," she said quickly. "I came of my own accord."

"So much the worse," I replied.

But nothing was to be gained by standing there and talking. Besides, it is never well for a soldier to dispute with his prisoner. It argues an insufficiency for his position. A captor should bear himself with dignity and reserve. I would show my quality.

I untied the horses and led them to the log on which she was sitting.

"Get up!" I said curtly and in a tone of command.

The natural rose flush of her cheeks deepened a little.

"You speak as if you were my master," she said.

"That is just what I am—for the present," I replied. "Mount your horse at once."

She gave me a sidewise look from eyes that flashed, but she stood upon the log.

"This log is too low, and the saddle is too high," she said.

I stepped forward and held out my hand to assist her.

"Don't touch me, you rebel!" she cried and leaped lightly into the saddle.

I felt hurt.

"I wish you wouldn't call me a rebel," I said.

"Why?"

"It's impolite."

"But it's true."

"Well, perhaps it is in a way, and in a way, too, I am proud of it. Are you proud of your king?"

"Yes."

"It doesn't take much to arouse English pride."

"You will think more of him when the war is over. It will pay you to do so."

"Meanwhile we will wait until then."

"What do you purpose to do with me—keep me a prisoner?"

"It is my misfortune."

"The courtesy of a rebel."

"I shall take you to General Morgan."

"Then Tarleton will rescue me. Your Morgan cannot stand before him."

I was afraid that she spoke the truth. We were outnumbered, and besides more than half our force was raw militia. The odds were great against us, and knowing it I did not reply to her taunt.

While we were talking she sat in the saddle with the easy seat of a good horsewoman. I held my horse loosely by the bridle. She was twiddling the whip in her hands. Suddenly she leaned over and lashed my horse across the eyes with her whip. The blow was given with all her might, and the startled horse reared, jerked the bridle out of my hand and ran away.

"Goodby, Mr. Rebel!" she shouted, and drawing her whip across her own horse galloped off in the opposite direction.

I believe I swore. I was angry and alarmed, too, for this girl, with her messages and accurate news about us, was a formidable enemy, escaped, and might cause the destruction of the entire army of the south and the loss of all the southern colonies. I drew a pistol, it being my idea to kill the horse, but it was a shot that I could not risk. I thrust the pistol back in my pocket and ran after my horse. He was 30 or 40 yards away, half mad with rage and pain, his bridle swinging beside him.

I am a very good runner, but I do not claim to be as swift as a horse. Nevertheless I made speed as I ran after him, and I whistled and shouted with a vigor that must have convinced him of my intentions. I looked back once, and the girl and the horse she rode were growing smaller as they sped over the desolate and unfenced fields. My need of a horse, too, was growing more pressing. Mounted, there was hope; afoot, there was none.

I whistled all the calls that a friendly and well treated horse should know and meantime did not neglect to run after him with the best speed that I could command. Presently he seemed to understand and to remember that I was not responsible for the blow. He slackened his pace, looked back over his shoulder at me and whinnied. I whistled encouragingly, he whinnied again, and, remembering who I was, his best friend, came to a full stop, for he was a most intelligent horse. In a half a minute I overtook him, leaped into the saddle and turned his head the other way.

"Now, old horse," I cried, "you can gallop, but you gallop my way."

I wore my spurs, and I gave him a touch of the steel. That was enough, for he was always ambitious and proud of his speed, and away we flew over the fields after the disappearing girl. She was a full quarter of a mile away, and her figure was growing dim on the horizon. Another quarter of a mile and she would be in the woods, where the concealment of the trees would enable her to elude my pursuit. Moreover, these English girls are often daring horsewomen, and even at the distance I could see that she rode like a trooper. But I knew the country, and she did not, and I hoped to secure from it some chance that would enable me to overtake her.

I encouraged my horse. I did more than encourage—I appealed to his pride and his sense of gratitude. I reminded him how I had ridden him all the way from the Hudson when I came south with Greene; how I had tended him and cared for him and fed him, often when I was compelled to go hungry myself. I appealed to him now not to let that girl escape when so much depended on her capture, when I would be eternally disgraced, and he with me, if we permitted ourselves to be tricked and outwitted at such a time by one red cheeked English girl.

He was a sensible horse, and he understood. He said nothing, not even a little snort, but his stride lengthened, and the swift and regular beat of his hoofs on the turf was music.

"Good horse, Old Put, good lad!" I said. I had named him Put after Old Put, the famous old Connecticut general, because he was so reliable and steady. He shook his ears slightly as a sign that he would do his best for me, having no time to say more, and he ran a little faster. I kept a sharp watch for stones and holes in the ground, having no mind to risk a fall which might ruin all, and nursed my comrade's strength, for on land as well as sea a stern chase is a long one.

The figure of the girl and the horse she rode was growing larger, good proof that I was gaining, which was not enough, however, for I might continue to gain, and yet she could elude me in the woods unless I was close upon her when she reached them. Her long hair had fallen down and was streaming behind her like a ribbon of spray with the sunshine on it, but I felt like giving that yellow hair a jerk just then could I have put my hands upon it.

"Steady, Put!" I said to my faithful comrade. "Do you see that girl with the yellow hair? Yes? Well, note the horse that she is riding, a common troop horse, clumsy, ill bred, no pedigree. Are you going to let yourself be beaten by him?"

His ears wagged violently, and he ran a foot to the second faster. We struck a piece of beautiful turf, evidently an old field left to itself until it could recover its fertility, and with the soft grass deadening and easing his footfalls Old Put raced for life. I could almost count the yards that we gained, and still she was not in the forest. She had not looked back until then, and it was a hasty glance, followed by a quick lashing of her mount. I judged that she, too, had noticed the gain and would now be unmerciful to her horse. I was exultant, willing to boast of it, and I shared my feelings with Old Put.

"Notice that yellow haired girl again, Put," I said. "When we catch her this time, we will take care that she does not serve us such a trick again. If we cannot trust an Englishman, Put, how on earth can we put any faith in an English woman?"

Put had received a slight slash once from the saber of an Englishman who had offered to surrender to me and then tried to back out of it, and he knew what I meant. For the first time he uttered a slight snort, called one new muscle into play, and we steadily shortened the distance between us and the girl.

She would have got into the wood a few moments later, but she abruptly reined in her horse, turned him half about and galloped off to the left. I guessed the trouble at once. The heavy rains often wash great gullies in our South Carolina soil, and a kind providence, wishing to oblige me, had placed one of these in her way. It was equal to a gain of 200 feet without an effort, and I turned Old Put at once into the course she was taking.

"Don't you see, Put," I said, "that the Lord is on our side and she and that burnt brown cob of hers that has passed most of his life hitched to a sutler's wagon will be delivered into our hands?"

Old Put fairly neighed, his first real expression of triumph. He was as sure of the victory now as I was, and I had confidence in the judgment of my old comrade.

"Stop, stop!" I shouted to the girl. "If you don't stop, I'll shoot!"

I had a long barreled horse pistol, which I had drawn and was flourishing magnificently. I was within hearing though not shooting range, and I trusted that I would be able to frighten her into yielding.

But she did not stop. She had worn her whip into shreds, and thin red streams of blood zigzagged across the horse's sides, but she pounded on with the stump. I felt a genuine pity for her horse, hack though he was, but none for her.

CHAPTER II.

KEEPING A PRISONER.

No more gullies thrust themselves across the way, and she was within 20 feet of the wood. She took another hurried look at me, and seeing my rapid gain alarm appeared on her face. She drew a little toy pistol from the cloak she wore and leveled it at me, or at least that seemed to be her intention. I call it a toy pistol, because I, a full grown soldier, would have felt deep shame had I been caught with such a weapon in my possession. She pulled the trigger, and the bullet cut the uncomplaining air somewhere, but not in my neighborhood. This bombardment cost her at least 20 feet of gain, but she thrust the terrible weapon back in her cloak and galloped on, with Old Put thundering at her heels. Then she was into the wood, and I was not far behind, shouting to her to stop; that I would surely overtake her and she was merely wasting the breath of both our horses and our own. Still she paid no heed, guiding her horse between the trees and through the bushes with considerable skill.

But, seeing the wood thicken presently, I was tempted to laugh. It was obvious now that the end of the race had come and I was the winner. The wood became so dense, the bushes clustering in thickets and the vines interlacing from tree to tree, that it formed an impenetrable wall. What I had feared would help her had been my best ally.

She stopped short and sat stiffly on her horse, her back turned to me. I wondered if she would draw out that amazing pistol again and threaten me with it, but she made no such attempt, evidently having arrived at wisdom at last. She dropped the stump of her switch on the ground and kept the back of her head toward me. QUEER DOINGS OF COLLEGE SOCIETIES

These are busy days in the college world. What with his examinations, the annual commencement, the conferring of degrees, the leaving of his alma mater and the summer vacation to look forward to the college man finds his time very well occupied. None of these things, however, is of quite as much importance as the festivities of his

ZETA PSI HOUSE, YALE.

Greek letter society, provided of course that he is fortunate enough to belong to one.

All sorts of jubilee and various kinds of mischief are in order just now in college towns, for the college fraternities seldom miss an opportunity to let the rest of the community know of their existence. The break up of the college year is, of course, a good time to celebrate.

This is the time of year at most colleges when undergraduates are honored by election to the fraternities. Some of these admit members from all classes, while the membership of others is restricted to men in the various years. At the larger universities, notably at Harvard and Yale, membership in the senior "frats" is an honor eagerly desired by the juniors, and it is an anxious waiting time for the members of the second class. The number of members in the senior societies is in most cases very limited, and the man who is elected must be indeed prominent and popular in college life.

Some of the customs connected with the election to a senior society are very curious and date back to a remote period in American history. At Yale, for example, the active members of the three senior fraternities, Skull and Bones, Scroll and Key and Wolf's Head, signify the election of their successors by slapping them on the shoulder. On the last Thursday in May at Yale a great crowd of students gathers on the campus. The juniors stand in a big group, each man hoping that he will be one of the chosen. In a few minutes one of the seniors is seen walking across the campus. With grim and solemn visage he advances until he reaches one of the men in the group of juniors. The senior lifts his hand and lets it fall with a heavy slap on the shoulder of the man selected without saying a word. So it goes until each of the three great senior organizations has selected its full quota of members for the ensuing year.

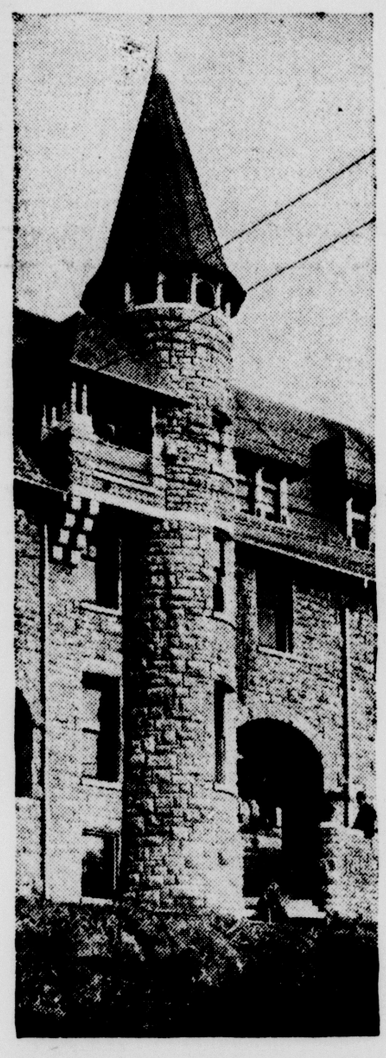
At the other colleges also quaint and curious ceremonies of election to the Greek letter and other fraternities take place. They are all according to tradition, for in such matters the college student is the most conservative of men. Even in the younger and smaller colleges, where the societies are things of recent growth, it is all done very formally and solemnly. To an outsider it sometimes seems very childish, but to the college man the ceremonies are always matters of interest.

To noncollegians the Greek letter fraternities, with their pins, badges and passwords, initiations and other secret observances, seem hedged about with a great deal of infantile mystery. In giving this impression they are exactly fulfilling the purpose of their members. In reality there is nothing very secret about most of them, for their chief end in most cases is to serve as social organizations. The division of the Greek letter society that exists in any college is called a "chapter." Very many of the "chapters," notably in the larger institutions of learning, now have their own homes in beautiful buildings. These serve as clubhouses for the members, and they answer the purpose admirably. Some of them indeed are fitted up as homes for the members.

The Greek letter fraternity is an institution peculiar to the American college. The only thing in foreign countries that resembles it is the "corps" at the German university, and even this presents as many points of diversity as of resemblance. The Greek letter fraternity takes its name from the Greek letters by which it is known and which have occult meanings known only to the initiated. Among the most prominent and popular fraternities are Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta, Beta Theta Pi and Psi Upsilon. The first Greek letter fraternity of any kind was founded at the College of William and Mary, Virginia, in 1776. It was not until the third or fourth decade of the past century, however, that they really took root in the colleges, but since then their growth has been rapid.

The fraternity serves the double purpose of uniting the men while attending the college or university and after they have left their alma mater. In New York some of the larger fraternities have erected beautiful houses, and the reunions of the members serve to recall the most delightful memories of college years.

Greek fraternity members are divided into two classes. While at college they are called active members. After graduation they are known as alumni.



DELTA KAPPA EPSILON HOUSE, CORNELL.

Some few fraternities also have what are known as honorary members. According to the latest obtainable figures, there are 29 fraternities, with 781 active and 369 inactive chapters. These have 130,980 members.

Women college students have their Greek letter fraternities also. There are seven of these, with 122 active chapters and 39 inactive, with 11,708 members. The women's societies are for the most part modeled after those of the male students. Besides these general fraternities there are in a number of colleges what are known as local fraternities which have no membership at other institutions.

Although the initiations in some of these societies are conducted with a great deal of tomfoolery and in a very few instances serious injury or even death has resulted to the candidate, when a man is once in he has plain sailing. College life is made decidedly more attractive by membership in the Greek letter and other societies. They foster the spirit of friendship and above all loyalty to one's alma mater.

Besides the pins of their "frats" most Greek letter men wear as a distinguishing sign upon their watch chains a flat watch key upon which are engraved the mystic Greek letters. The sight of the watch key serves as a passport from one Greek letter man to another wherever they meet and is indeed a bond of union all through life. At the reunions of the men of a "frat," especially in larger cities, it is no uncommon sight to see gray headed men hobnobbing joyfully with the graduates just fresh from academic halls. "The tie that binds" is the potent spell of membership in one of the great fraternities.

THERE ARE MANY ROADS

The Finger Posts Marking the Many By-Paths of Present Day Troubles. All Seem to Point the Same —Lack of Nerve Force.

Day by day the columns of this paper bring new evidences from East Liverpool people of the great work being done by Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills. Why they accomplish so much is easily explained. They are prepared with an eye single to restoring nerve forces. They accomplish this object which no other medicine in the world has ever been able to do. That's why hundreds of East Liverpool people offer their testimony.

Mr. Cyrus Hanselman, of 279 Sugar street, East Liverpool, Ohio, says: "Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are a fine medicine. It has done for me more to cure my old rheumatism than anything I ever took. The rheumatism had hung on for four or five years, and was all in the legs and shoulders. I could not sleep and at times could not move with the pain. I was told of the Nerve Pills and got them at Larkins' drug store, corner Sixth and East Market streets, and they took hold firmly, something nothing else ever did. The pain and stiffness is about gone. I am feeling strong and get about and sleep well. It won't take many more to cure me completely."

Howells' Advice to Writers.

One day at Lakewood while sitting at a little table in the big rotunda hall drinking afternoon tea I met Mr. W. D. Howells and had a delightful conversation with him. After knowing the personality of this famous author one enjoys his writing ten times more—he is so magnetic and his conversation so interesting and breezy. "Yes," he said, "I always advise any one who has an inclination for it to try to write. One shouldn't expect to have the first things one does published, but one must keep on trying. It is an excellent plan to set down something one has seen in everyday life and try to get a story out of it. Indeed, it's the best way to practice.

"Writing is mostly drudgery," he continued. "I have to force myself to go into my library to work, and I find myself putting off the hour as long as possible."

"But when you once sit down?" I ventured.

"Even then it's hard work for awhile until I get into the swing. Let no one imagine the muse comes without a summons and without a good deal of urging! At least she never does to me!"—Anna Wentworth in Woman's Home Companion.

Pittsburg, June 7.—Edward Bigelow was yesterday restored to his former position as director of the department of public works by City Recorder A. M. Brown; after the latter had requested, received and accepted the resignation of George W. Wilson. Mr. Bigelow, who appeared beaming with satisfaction over the outcome, verbally announced his acceptance of the appointment, saying that he could not tell when he would assume the active management of the affairs of the office until he had seen and talked with Recorder Brown. He has tendered his thanks to the recorder and was to have a talk with him this morning. Mr. Wilson's resignation takes effect immediately, but he will remain in active direction of the office until his successor is ready to go in.

This is the first exercise by Recorder Brown of the power of removal of department heads conferred upon him by the new charter.

Washington, June 7.—The new civil government to be established in the Philippines is receiving the consideration of the president and the secretary of war. It will differ very little from what was first intended, as there will be a governor for the archipelago and a legislative council and other officers. This government will have control of all civil affairs, but it will be under the war power to the extent of being directed by the secretary of war. There will be a nice distinction as to the authority of the general commanding the troops in the Philippines and the governor to be appointed under the civil government. No official declaration has been made as to who will be the supreme authority, but it is known that the secretary of war will be supreme. While it is not the intention to conduct the government of the Philippines under the Spooner law, that law will be taken as sanctioning what is to be done. The new government will be similar to that which existed for a short time in the early days of New Mexico. There was a civil governor appointed by the president and a commanding general of the army. Washington, June 7.—The industrial commission, at its session, considered the tariff question with consequential reference to trusts, the witnesses being Congressman Robert W. Mr. Taylor took the position that any discussion in congress of the tariff at this time would have a damaging effect upon the country. Mr. Taylor also said that he believed in the principle of reciprocity, but that he did not endorse any of the recently negotiated reciprocity treaties.

Dr. Gunton devoted himself especially to replying to an argument recently made before the commission by Mr. Edward Atkinson for freer trade. QUEER DOINGS OF COLLEGE SOCIETIES

These are busy days in the college world. What with his examinations, the annual commencement, the conferring of degrees, the leaving of his alma mater and the summer vacation to look forward to the college man finds his time very well occupied. None of these things, however, is of quite as much importance as the festivities of his

ZETA PSI HOUSE, YALE.

Greek letter society, provided of course that he is fortunate enough to belong to one.

All sorts of jubilee and various kinds of mischief are in order just now in college towns, for the college fraternities seldom miss an opportunity to let the rest of the community know of their existence. The break up of the college year is, of course, a good time to celebrate.

This is the time of year at most colleges when undergraduates are honored by election to the fraternities. Some of these admit members from all classes, while the membership of others is restricted to men in the various years. At the larger universities, notably at Harvard and Yale, membership in the senior "frats" is an honor eagerly desired by the juniors, and it is an anxious waiting time for the members of the second class. The number of members in the senior societies is in most cases very limited, and the man who is elected must be indeed prominent and popular in college life.

Some of the customs connected with the election to a senior society are very curious and date back to a remote period in American history. At Yale, for example, the active members of the three senior fraternities, Skull and Bones, Scroll and Key and Wolf's Head, signify the election of their successors by slapping them on the shoulder. On the last Thursday in May at Yale a great crowd of students gathers on the campus. The juniors stand in a big group, each man hoping that he will be one of the chosen. In a few minutes one of the seniors is seen walking across the campus. With grim and solemn visage he advances until he reaches one of the men in the group of juniors. The senior lifts his hand and lets it fall with a heavy slap on the shoulder of the man selected without saying a word. So it goes until each of the three great senior organizations has selected its full quota of members for the ensuing year.

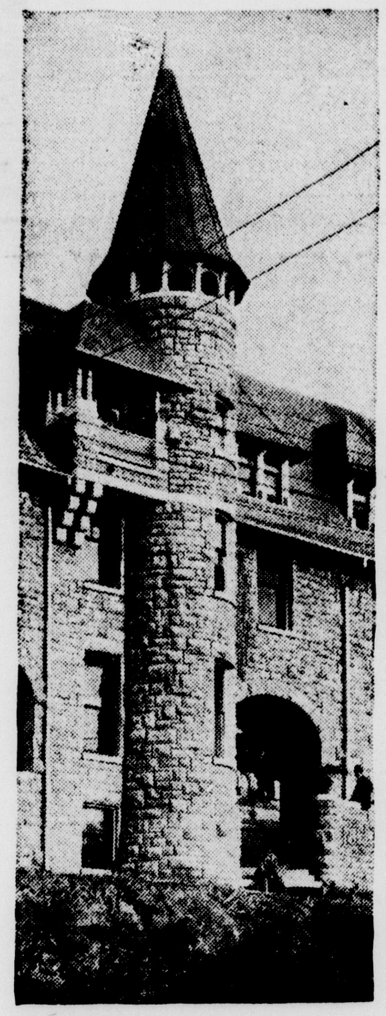
At the other colleges also quaint and curious ceremonies of election to the Greek letter and other fraternities take place. They are all according to tradition, for in such matters the college student is the most conservative of men. Even in the younger and smaller colleges, where the societies are things of recent growth, it is all done very formally and solemnly. To an outsider it sometimes seems very childish, but to the college man the ceremonies are always matters of interest.

To noncollegians the Greek letter fraternities, with their pins, badges and passwords, initiations and other secret observances, seem hedged about with a great deal of infantile mystery. In giving this impression they are exactly fulfilling the purpose of their members. In reality there is nothing very secret about most of them, for their chief end in most cases is to serve as social organizations. The division of the Greek letter society that exists in any college is called a "chapter." Very many of the "chapters," notably in the larger institutions of learning, now have their own homes in beautiful buildings. These serve as clubhouses for the members, and they answer the purpose admirably. Some of them indeed are fitted up as homes for the members.

The Greek letter fraternity is an institution peculiar to the American college. The only thing in foreign countries that resembles it is the "corps" at the German university, and even this presents as many points of diversity as of resemblance. The Greek letter fraternity takes its name from the Greek letters by which it is known and which have occult meanings known only to the initiated. Among the most prominent and popular fraternities are Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta, Beta Theta Pi and Psi Upsilon. The first Greek letter fraternity of any kind was founded at the College of William and Mary, Virginia, in 1776. It was not until the third or fourth decade of the past century, however, that they really took root in the colleges, but since then their growth has been rapid.

The fraternity serves the double purpose of uniting the men while attending the college or university and after they have left their alma mater. In New York some of the larger fraternities have erected beautiful houses, and the reunions of the members serve to recall the most delightful memories of college years.

Greek fraternity members are divided into two classes. While at college they are called active members. After graduation they are known as alumni.



DELTA KAPPA EPSILON HOUSE, CORNELL.

Some few fraternities also have what are known as honorary members. According to the latest obtainable figures, there are 29 fraternities, with 781 active and 369 inactive chapters. These have 130,980 members.

Women college students have their Greek letter fraternities also. There are seven of these, with 122 active chapters and 39 inactive, with 11,708 members. The women's societies are for the most part modeled after those of the male students. Besides these general fraternities there are in a number of colleges what are known as local fraternities which have no membership at other institutions.

College life is made decidedly more attractive by membership in the Greek letter and other societies. They foster the spirit of friendship and above all loyalty to one's alma mater.

Besides the pins of their "frats" most Greek letter men wear as a distinguishing sign upon their watch chains a flat watch key upon which are engraved the mystic Greek letters. The sight of the watch key serves as a passport from one Greek letter man to another wherever they meet and is indeed a bond of union all through life. At the reunions of the men of a "frat," especially in larger cities, it is no uncommon sight to see gray headed men hobnobbing joyfully with the graduates just fresh from academic halls. "The tie that binds" is the potent spell of membership in one of the great fraternities.

SCHLEY'S KIND REPLY.

One of a Mob of Brokers Asked "What's the Matter With Sampson?"

GALLANT OFFICER; GOOD MAN,

He Replied, Also Asserting There Was "Nothing" the Matter With His Rival—Went to Visit Sears at Maritime Exchange.

New York, June 7.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley went to the Maritime Exchange to visit Lieutenant Commander James A. Sears, who was his flag lieutenant at the battle of Santiago and who was recently sent to the hydrographic bureau of the exchange.

The rear admiral was recognized and was asked to meet the members. He consented, and as soon as he appeared the brokers surrounded him, cheered themselves hoarse and asked for a speech. This Admiral Schley declined to do, but said he would be pleased to shake hands with everybody if he were allowed to go. This caused more cheering, and when it subsided someone shouted:

"What's the matter with Sampson?"

The Admiral replied: "Nothing; he is a gallant officer and a good man."

This was greeted with more cheers and the uproar became so great that someone jokingly telephoned to the police station that a riot was in progress in the Maritime Exchange. The police escorted the admiral, who was laughing by this time, to safety, but only after he had shaken hands all around.

CAPITOL BILL AMENDED.

Appropriation Reduced From $5,000,000 to $4,000,000 In Penn'a House.

Harrisburg, June 7.—The Fox capitol bill passed second reading Thursday in the house, after it had been amended to appropriate $4,000,000, instead of $5,000,000, to complete the building. The bill as it passed the senate appropriated $5,000,000 and provided a commission of five, one of whom shall be a Democrat, to be appointed by Governor Stone. The house Democrats are opposed to minority represenation on the commission, and on motion of Mr. Haag, of Schuylkill, the clause providing for the appointment of a Democrat was stricken out.

The senate remained in session only about 20 minutes Thursday, after which adjournment was taken until next Monday night at 9 o'clock.

Among other proceedings, the Muehlbronner bill amending the act governing second class cities, popularly known as the Pittsburg "ripper" law, was passed finally.

A resolution presented by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia, providing that after Tuesday next no new bills shall be introduced in the senate, was adopted.

After the calendar had been cleared of bills on first reading the senate adjourned.

SCHLEY'S KIND REPLY.

One of a Mob of Brokers Asked "What's the Matter With Sampson?"

GALLANT OFFICER; GOOD MAN,

He Replied, Also Asserting There Was "Nothing" the Matter With His Rival—Went to Visit Sears at Maritime Exchange.

New York, June 7.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley went to the Maritime Exchange to visit Lieutenant Commander James A. Sears, who was his flag lieutenant at the battle of Santiago and who was recently sent to the hydrographic bureau of the exchange.

The rear admiral was recognized and was asked to meet the members. He consented, and as soon as he appeared the brokers surrounded him, cheered themselves hoarse and asked for a speech. This Admiral Schley declined to do, but said he would be pleased to shake hands with everybody if he were allowed to go. This caused more cheering, and when it subsided someone shouted:

"What's the matter with Sampson?"

The Admiral replied: "Nothing; he is a gallant officer and a good man."

This was greeted with more cheers and the uproar became so great that someone jokingly telephoned to the police station that a riot was in progress in the Maritime Exchange. The police escorted the admiral, who was laughing by this time, to safety, but only after he had shaken hands all around.

CAPITOL BILL AMENDED.

Appropriation Reduced From $5,000,000 to $4,000,000 In Penn'a House.

Harrisburg, June 7.—The Fox capitol bill passed second reading Thursday in the house, after it had been amended to appropriate $4,000,000, instead of $5,000,000, to complete the building. The bill as it passed the senate appropriated $5,000,000 and provided a commission of five, one of whom shall be a Democrat, to be appointed by Governor Stone. The house Democrats are opposed to minority represenation on the commission, and on motion of Mr. Haag, of Schuylkill, the clause providing for the appointment of a Democrat was stricken out.

The senate remained in session only about 20 minutes Thursday, after which adjournment was taken until next Monday night at 9 o'clock.

Among other proceedings, the Muehlbronner bill amending the act governing second class cities, popularly known as the Pittsburg "ripper" law, was passed finally.

A resolution presented by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia, providing that after Tuesday next no new bills shall be introduced in the senate, was adopted.

After the calendar had been cleared of bills on first reading the senate adjourned.

17TH YEAR. NO. 306. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1901.—TWELVE PAGES. TWO CENTS

President Croxall Made a Speech Which Banished Indifference.

BRUSH FACTORY PROJECT

Pittsburg Firm Will Locate Here If $5,000 in Stock Be Taken.

THE GLASS FACTORY MATTER UP

And a Disposition to Encourage It Manifested—A $250,000 Enterprise Hinted At—Committee Appointed to Canvass for Members.

Prompted by the apparent indifference on the part of East Liverpool's citizens by the small attendance at the meeting of the board of trade last night, President Croxall made a speech, which, though of an impromptu nature, was effectually to the point and characterized with sound logic from beginning to end. Mr. Croxall did not begin his speech until the meeting was almost half over, but in the 15 minutes which he devoted to his remarks he accomplished more in the way of arousing enthusiasm than has been done otherwise in all the time since the board was first organized.

After repeated efforts to induce expressions from the different persons present as to what action to take on the different matters before the board, Mr. Croxall, who became rather provoked at his poor success in inducing the spectators to voice their sentiments, arose from his seat. "Gentlemen," he began, "it certainly appears to me that enthusiasm at this meeting is too much lacking. It is discouraging to begin when the attendance is so small, but those of us here should not sit idle and wait on each other to do the talking." The speaker then went on to state that he was unable to explain why it was that the citizens evinced such marked indifference in the matter of encouraging the board of trade in the work of furthering the interests of the city. He said that when he became identified with the board he did so with the positive belief that the citizens in general would realize the importance of such an organization and do their utmost to urge the matter along.

"However," continued Mr. Croxall, "instead of the great majority of our people aiding in the movement they have paid no attention whatever to the appeals which have been made to them for assistance, and have not even taken enough interest to attend our meetings. What is the use of a few of us trying to work for the good of the city when hundreds, even thousands, of our neighbors sit idly by and wait for us to do all the work when they would receive an equal benefit with us?" The speaker then stated that he had met with different persons in the city who thought East Liverpool did not need a board of trade, but none could give any reason for making the statement.

"East Liverpool does need a board of trade," said Mr. Croxall, "and there is no reason why we should not have one. But," he added, "if we can't arouse enough enthusiasm to induce a larger attendance at our meetings than is here tonight we had better quit at once." The speaker thanked those in attendance for the interest they had manifested, and concluded his speech by saying that if the proper spirit was shown by the citizens who should feel interested a board of trade could be made to flourish.

The address of Mr. Croxall had the desired effect, and in a very few moments the meeting had been transformed from a tiresome, sleepy session to one of business and animation.

When the meeting was called or order there were about 20 persons present, mostly business and professional men. While the attendance was painfully small those who were present were there to take an active part and all did so. President Croxall announced the Pittsburg gentlemen who had promised to be present at the meeting were ready to submit a proposition to the board. He then introduced W. S. Walker and Charles T. Moore, representing the Walker Brush Manufacturing company of Pittsburg. At a request from the president Mr. Moore addressed the meeting.

He stated that because of the expensive rent and for other reasons it was the desire of the company he represented to move away from Pittsburg. He stated that the company was incorporated with a capital of $50,000. Patents were held on the different kinds of brushes which they made, and that at present the plant employed about 28 persons. Mr. Moore stated that a patent had recently been received on a new kind of brush, and once the factory was located away from Pittsburg it would be increased to double its present capacity. He said if the proper inducements were given the company would move to East Liverpool as soon as a building could be erected.

Mr. Walker then spoke. He said that a building 40x200 feet would be large enough to hold all necessary machinery. During a visit recently made to this city he had been shown the Chambers building in the East End, which, he said, would answer his purpose. He asked that $5,000 worth of stock be subscribed, the same to be used in the purchase of the building.

In reply to questions asked by the different ones present, Mr. Walker stated that he could guarantee a profit of 15 per cent on the total investment. Skilled labor was principally employed, the average salary of each of the mechanics being $21 per week and that the present payroll amounted to about $350 to $400. He said that most of the men employed at present would come here. Mr. Walker said that while the majority of his employes were men, he had four girls and a few boys at work also.

At the conclusion of Mr. Walker's remarks, President Croxall asked for expressions from the spectators. Dr. Calhoun said he considered the proposition a good one and thought the necessary $5,000 could be easily raised. He stated that he had been talking with a building and loan company, and that he had been informed that the Chambers property in the East End could be bought for the above amount and that the company would take stock.

C. T. Hard took the floor and stated that he thought a committee should be appointed to inspect the factory before anything was done toward raising the money for the purchase of a building. Secretary Travis thought Mr. Hard's idea a good one, and made a motion, which carried, that a committee of three be appointed to make the desired inspection.

The president named three of the parties present, among them being Joseph Betz, who took the floor and argued that he thought it should be the duty of the board of directors to make the inspection. Although there was considerable objection made at first to Mr. Betz's suggestion it was finally decided to appoint a committee from the board to do the work. The president then named John W. Moore, Thompson Andrews and J. W. Gipner. The committee was instructed to make the inspection without delay and report at the next meeting.

President Croxall stated that N. G. Macrum, who had been elected a member of the board of directors, had declined to serve. On motion it was left for the president to appoint another man to fill the vacancy. Mr. Croxall will name Mr. Macrum's successor at the next meeting.

Secretary Travis asked for a report from the committee appointed to draw up the constitution and by-laws. Moore stated that he had done the work, but that the other members of the committee had not yet passed on the same. He read the rules as he had drawn them up.

Louis Steinfeld asked what had been done with the glass house proposition. He stated that he was inclined to believe it would be a far better industry for the city than the contemplated brush factory, and said he was not only willing to take stock, but would assist in any way possible to dispose of stock to others. Mr. Travis stated that he had met with "rough sledding" in his efforts to get people interested, and said that an entire day which he had devoted to hard work endeavoring to sell stock was productive of nothing.

Several others were inclined to agree with Mr. Steinfeld that a glass house would be a good thing for East Liverpool, and all evidenced an eagerness to boom the project. Mr. Calhoun thought the committee which had been appointed to solicit subscriptions should be increased. Various other views were expressed with the result that a motion prevailed empowering the committee with authority to ask for any assistance they de-

CHESTER MILL TO BE STARTED

A Well Defined Rumor That the Tin Plate Trust Will Run It.

MR. BANFIELD INTERVIEWED

Refuses to Discuss Plans, But Admits That Dismantling Has Been Stopped And States That No Changes Are to Be Made at Present

Irondale, June 7.—(Special.)—William Banfield, prominently identified with the steel trust, was in Irondale today making an inspection of the rolling mill. When questioned concerning the report that he had resigned from the trust, Mr. Banfield stated emphatically that there was absolutely no truth in the rumor.

Concerning the Chester mill he said that the work of dismantling the plant had been discontinued and that no further changes would be made at present.

Regarding the prospect of the mill being put into operation Mr. Banfield refused to say. He would neither deny nor confirm the report that the plant is to start. He left here on the noon train for the east.

There is a well defined rumor, apparently based on the best of authority, that the American Tin Plate company, of which Mr. Banfield is district manager, is to take charge of the mill and run it. From what can he learned of the intentions of the officials, the Chester mill will soon be running, and employing a large number of men. The mill will be utilized to make black sheets for use in tin plate mills.

CHECKER EXPERTS

Revival of Interest in the Game Among Local Players.

Interest is reviving among the checker experts in this city, and just now there is some talk of a tournament to be held here. Al Obney, who is one of the local experts, was at Pittsburg recently, where he played a number of games with some of the Smoky City crack players.

Mr. Obney made a splendid showing, having one win and two draws to his credit.

OVER 200 GUESTS ENJOY A DANCE

Given By the Boys of the High School at Rock Springs.

DISTURBERS WERE CALLED

It Had Been Announced That None But Holders of Tickets Would Be Admitted, But They Insisted Upon Remaining.

The dance given at Rock Springs last evening by the high school boys was one of the most enjoyable ever held at the park. Although rain continued to fall throughout the entire evening there were present nearly 200 guests.

Some little annoyance was occasioned early in the evening by a party of young people who did not hold invitations. The outsiders insisted upon remaining, but the management informed them they would not be permitted to stay, and they adjourned to the gallery. Whan the first dance was started the spectators continued their annoyance. Manager Maxwell promptly told the disturbers they must behave or leave the grounds. The warning was sufficient, and they departed soon afterward.

The high school boys and ther friends enjoyed themselves until a late hour, and considering that this, in the cases of not a few members of the class, was their maiden effort as hosts, the boys did themselves proud.

RECOVERED HIS RIC

John Rinehart's Missing Horse and Buggy Found and Returned.

Perhaps the happiest man in East Liverpool today is John Rinehart. The horse and buggy which was stolen from him has been returned. Yesterday morning Charles Gill telephoned Mr. Rinehart that he had a clue to the whereabouts of the outfit, and he followed it up. The result was that it was located near Clarkson.

The fellow who took it had sold it to a farmer named Lyons. Mr. Gill secured the rig and returned it to the Rinehart stable yesterday afternoon at about 5:30 o'clock. It was learned that the fellow had been traveling all over the county, and had not crossed the bridge and gone into West Virginia, as was at first supposed.

CONTRACT LET

For Grand Stand at West End Ball Park—Bloomer Girls Coming.

The contract for the erection of the grand stand at the West End park was let this morning to John C. Cain. The structure will be 25x80 feet, and work upon its erection will be commenced at once.

The management of the East Liverpool ball club have booked an attraction for next Wednesday afternoon in the shape of an aggregation known as "The New England Bloomer Girls," and they will play a game of ball with the home team at Rock Springs on that day. The team comes from Wellsburg to this city where they play the team of that city on Tuesday.

TEAM FELL IN A HOLE

AND EAST LIVERPOOL IS SUED FOR $326 DAMAGES.

J. J. Chamberlain Brings the Action Resulting From a Mishap on the Road.

Lisbon, June 7.—(Special.)—Jesse J. Chamberlain has had an action for damages against the city of East Liverpool, pending here for some time. The case is now on trial.

While driving on the California hollow road, November 20, 1899, at night, his team fell into a hole about eight feet deep and 16 feet wide. He claims the hole was without proper protection and as a result of the accident, a mare, valued at $250, was killed, and the other horse so injured as to be unfit to work for over three weeks. The harness was also broken, causing $25 loss. By reason of being thrown out of work for several weeks Chamberlain asks $20 damages. He also wants to be paid $10 for burying the horse that was killed. In all he asks damages in the sum of $326.

HER HOUSE MAY FALL AND SHE WANTS $3,000

Mrs. Susan Marshall's Novel Suit Against Thomas Walklet.

EAST LIVERPOOL IS SUED

By George Shaw Who Asks $2,500 For Personal Injuries Received.

Filed By a Salem Woman—Says Her Husband Whipped Her And Smashed Her False Teeth—Defendant Wins in Corns-Burton Case.

Lisbon, June 7. — (Special.)—Mrs. Susan Marshall, of East Liverpool, who owns property on Third street, has brought action for $3,000 damages against Thomas Walklet. Mrs. Marshall's lot is known as No. 168. She accuses the defendant, who owns property adjoining, of having dug the earth from the side of her foundation well to a depth below the bottom of the wall, leaving it exposed and without support, except the ground under it. She claims her house has been deprived of its proper support and is liable to collapse at any moment. J. H. Brookes is her attorney.

George Shaw has brought action against the city of East Liverpool for $2,500 damages by reason of injuries sustained on April 1. Shaw says that he was walking along Sixth street when he stumbled over a wooden post, which extended three inches above the middle of the sidewalk and was firmly imbedded in the ground. It had been for several months a menace to all persons walking along the sidewalk. He claims the city neglected to move it or to guard it. When he tripped over it and fell he broke his left arm and was otherwise injured. He claims that he has not been able to perform any work since the accident, and that his injuries are permanent. Attorneys Brookes and Thompson filed the action.

Mrs. Mary E. Sheen, of Salem, wants to be divorced from James A. Sheen. She asks the court to give her the custody of her three minor children and to require the defendant to provide for their education. She was married in Salem in June, 1887. For three years she says her husband has neglected her and the children, failing to provide for them. A week ago, the wife says, Sheen struck and beat her, cutting and destroying her wearing apparel and forcing her false teeth from her mouth and crushing them with his heel. Mrs. Sheen says her husband is in the habit of beating her, and cursing and swearing at her. He is a telephone lineman and earns good wages. J. E. Scott filed the action.

Mrs. Lizzie Belle Wallace, of Salem, has been granted a divorce from Charles R. Wallace, on grounds of habitual drunkenness and gross neglect. The court ordered that Wallace refrain from interfering in any way with the children. The couple were married in 1885.

The case of Albert W. Corns against William T. Burton, of East Liverpool, went to the jury this morning. In a short time a verdict was returned in favor of the defendant.

Roy Wilson, a Wellsville boy, was arraigned before Judge Boone today, charged with stealing lead pipe. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to jail for 20 days and to pay the costs.

FIGHTERS FINED

George Wasson And Ed Jackson Contribute $6.60 to the City's Coffers.

Benjamin Boody, who was arrested a few days since in company with Lou Hutton, the shanty boat owner, charged with keeping a disorderly house, called at the mayor's office this morning and secured the money which Mayor Davidson had been holding. Boody left for Coraopolis.

George Wasson and Ed Jackson, who were arrested yesterday afternoon for fighting, pleaded guilty before the mayor last evening and were each fined $2 and costs. John Dimmerling, employed at the East Liverpool pottery, who was also connected with the fight, claims that Wasson and Jackson attacked him, and that he acted in self-defense. He has not yet had his hearing.

There were no arrests last night.

EAST END

AN AWAKING

Smith's Ferry Has a Boom As the Trolley Road Approaches the Town.

Sleepy Smith's Ferry is waking up and so is her neighbor, Georgetown. In the latter village the boom is caused by the operations of the Beaver Coal company, while at Smith's Ferry the boom is altogether due to the fact that she is to become a suburb of East Liverpool. When the street car line is completed to Beaver Creek, Smith's Ferry will be almost as near to the city proper as Klondike and the East End are at present and the car fare will be just the same.

Consequently there is already a good demand for houses in Smith's Ferry and the prices asked have increased about 25 per cent, but are still about one-third lower than in the East End.

UNDER THE ENGINE

Valuable Dog Belonging to William Heckathorn Was Killed.

A valuable dog owned by William Heckathorn was killed by the shipping engine yesterday afternoon at the crossing in the East End. The engine was running at a high rate of speed and the dog ran at it and jumped at Roy Colclough, who was standing on the step.

Colclough managed to get out of the way and the dog fell under the engine and was killed.

Knife Fell on His Foot.

Samuel, the 10-year-old son of James Eardley, of Klondike, met with a slight accident yesterday that will confine him to the house for a few days. He knocked a large butcher knife off the table, which fell edge downward across his big toe, cutting it to the bone. A physician was summoned to dress the wound.

Off for Buffalo.

Elmer Stevenson is organizing an excursion party to visit the Pan-American exposition. The party will consist of about 15 men, who will start on the trip either June 15 or July 1. They will remain in Buffalo two weeks.

Bird Dog Poisoned.

A valuable bird dog belonging to Jerry Riddle was poisoned last night.

Mrs. Dr. W.E. Mowen is confined to her bed with illness.

John Douglass is moving from East Liverpool to Dixonville.

Richard Chambers will leave this evening on an extended trip to the south. He will meet his brother, Emmet, at Pittsburg and they will leave that city tomorrow morning en route to Raleigh, N. C. They will visit several other cities in North Carolina and will proceed by way of Charleston through South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. ARSON THREATENED

BY AN EAST LIVERPOOL COUPLE AT ALLIANCE.

They Had a Quart of Whisky and Were Very Drunk—Sent to the Works.

According to a report in the Alliance Review an East Liverpool couple have been misbehaving themselves in that city. There is no such name as that given in the item known in this city, but fictitious names may have been given. Here is the story:

Henry and Mary Sproze, an ill-favored pair hailing from East Liverpool, were arrested by Officers Oswalt and Alexander at about 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. They had been loitering about the outskirts of the city all afternoon, and along about 5 o'clock word was sent to police headquarters asking that officers be sent out to the Rockhill road to arrest them. They had a quart of whisky and were very drunk. They had gone into McGrath's barn to sleep off their jags, but were driven out. They then threatened to burn the building. As long as they were on the far side of the road the police could not arrest them, and they did not cross over into town until about 6 o'clock, when the police were at once sent for.

When the officers arrived they found the pair lying in the bushes. The woman refused to go a step and lay down in the road. There are no call boxes out there, so a telephone message for the wagon was sent from Transue & Williams' shops.

Perry Oswalt took the bottle of whisky from the pair, and the woman furnished much amousement for the people along Main street, by loving overtures toward Perry in trying to get another drink from the bottle. She would upbraid him awhile, then she would try to get her arms around his neck and coax him, much to his disgust.

When the couple appeared before the mayor the woman asserted that yesterday was the first time she ever tasted liquor in her life, which statement so overcame his honor that he had to be fanned. His emotions did not so far overcome him as to prevent him saying $10 and costs, to stand committed to the workhouse until paid. They had not a cent and were taken over on No. 9 by Chief Howell.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Convention at Martin's Ferry Opens Auspiciously.

Martin's Ferry, June 7. — The district convention of Epworth Leagues of the Steubenville district is in session in this city. Not fewer than 75 delegates were present at the opening session yesterday, and the meeting promises to be a very interesting one.

The afternoon's session consisted only of a song and praise service, the introductory remarks by the president, S. C. Dennis, of Smithfield, a former teacher in the schools of this township, a paper entitled "Personal Work," by Mrs. Messenger, of East Liverpool, and the reception of delegates. An interesting program was presented in the evening.

We are showing the handsomest line of dress trousers in the country. A special line of flannels today.

MOST COSTLY OF DRUGS.

Some Sell at Retail For More Than Their Weight In Gold.

"The price of many drugs used in medicine is astonishing to those who are not acquainted with the subject," remarked a druggist. "There are several that are worth their weight in gold (about $20 an ounce), while $2, $3 or $5 an ounce are quite common prices in pharmacy. I filled a prescription the other day that cost $25. But there is one drug that I can recall which is worth much more than its weight in gold. That is pseudo physostigmine. I don't think that it has a popular name. It is too rich for that. In the pharmacists' list it is quoted at $1 a grain, or $437.50 an ounce. The seed from which the drug is made grows in India and Brazil, as well as in parts of South Africa. This seed, tradition says, was once used by native chiefs as an ordeal. The ordeal generally resulted in the death of the man upon whom it was tried and so was considered as a great truth finder. The prepared drug is sometimes used now in prescriptions for the treatment of heart disease.

"Another drug which takes the palm for costliness is, curiously enough, the one which is perhaps the most widely known by name of them all to the general public—namely, musk. Its retail price at the present moment is about $50 an ounce, $600 a pound apothecary, or 2½ times the value of pure gold, 24 carats fine. It is obtained from the musk deer, a very rare animal, and is contained in a follicle, of which there is only one in each animal, so that an ounce of the drug represents approximately one of these precious animals. As it is largely used for scent, the demand constantly exceeds the supply, and the price has been steadily advancing. There is no reason why it should not go to $250 or $500 an ounce during the next few years, as the musk deer is gradually vanishing from the face of the earth."—Kansas City Journal.

BEWARE OF THE STRAP.

A Possible Source of Infection to Those Who Ride In Street Cars.

The connection between the microbe and the street car strap has frequently been discussed and at least one recent instance has proved somewhat distressingly that danger is likely to lurk in the piece of leather which helps to support so many women during the rush hours of the day. It was to protect a fresh pair of white gloves that a New York woman, compelled to stand, held her handkerchief inside the strap while going to the theater. On her way home she was again compelled to stand, and once more the handkerchief came between her glove and the leather.

Whether it was after that or during the evening at the theater that she once thoughtlessly put the handkerchief to her face is a detail that she does not recall, but two days afterward a pain on her lip became so intolerable that she was compelled to see a doctor, who found her suffering from incipient blood poisoning, which it was already too late for him to prevent. The most that he could do was to watch her carefully through a long attack of illness, which at one time threatened to end fatally.

He attributed this to some poisonous substance which had passed to her handkerchief from the strap, and that was his diagnosis the moment he heard the story of the ride on the cable car. She fortunately recovered, and her physician thinks that the present disfigurement to her face which resulted from the necessity of an operation will not be permanent. The case has convinced this physician, who is a man of considerable experience in surgery, of the dangers that lurk in the street car strap.—New York Sun.

One Improvident Family.

The minister in an adjoining Tennessee town was very much wrought up over the pitiful condition of a parishioner's family. He went to their home and, finding they were almost starving, decided that something should be done for them. He accordingly solicited contributions for their relief. Receiving a liberal response, he promptly turned over the money to the suffering ones, thinking that all would be well.

The first thing they did, however, was to go to the photographer of the town and have a dozen pictures made of each of the five members of the family, exhausting the amount, leaving them in as bad condition as they were before he had given them assistance.—Memphis Scimitar.

Brought Down the House.

On one occasion, when Arthur Roberts, the English actor, was performing the part of Captain Crosstree in the burlesque of "Black Eyed Susan" at Glasgow, he converted an awkward contretemps into a hit. In one of the scenes Crosstree enters supposed to be inebriated and staggers about the stage. In doing so Mr. Roberts accidentally came in contact with the scenery of the inn, bringing the whole set down. The curtain had to be lowered, and the vivacious comedian came to the front and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, you see when we come to Glasgow we always bring down the house."

FIGHTING BOYS

One Had the Backing of His Mother, and the Battle Was Lively.

The residents of Jethro were treated to an exhibition of youthful slugging that would have done credit to more experienced hands, last evening, when two boys became involved in a quarrel and their mothers interfered. The boys, who are about 10 years of age, had been in the habit of quarreling, but one of them had always left when he got the worst of a round. Last evening his mother saw him running and the other boy after him. She became so angry that she marched her son back to the other boy and told him that if he did not whip his tormentor she would beat him within an inch of his life.

With this incentive and such a pleasant prospect before him her son was enabled to do battle more fiercely than he had ever done in the past, and the result was that after a long and fierce contest he came off victorious. The other boy's mother appeared on the scene about this time and the two engaged in a terrible verbal battle that lasted about an hour and injured nobody.

No Pegs.

Beerbohm Tree had a comical experience on his first appearance as the corpulent Falstaff. In the last act he had arranged that Falstaff, disconcerted by gibes and buffets of the fairies in Windsor forest, should make one herculean effort to climb the oak tree. The pegs that were to serve as supports for that tree were always conspicuous by their absence. On the morning before the performance Mr. Tree was told they should positively be fixed on the tree. The morning came, but with it no pegs. Eloquence was stifled; even invective faltered. He pointed to the tree and with the calm of despair blurted out to the defaulter, "No pegs!"

Such an ejaculation, spoken more in sorrow than in anger, would, he hoped, appeal to that last remnant of conscience which even the papier mache bosom of a property man might be supposed to retain. In the evening there was a dress rehearsal, but still no pegs could be seen. Mr. Tree's form quivered—beneath the padding—with pent up emotions, and in a torrent of passion and a voice shaken by righteous wrath he exclaimed:

"Where are those pegs?"

"Pegs—pegs!" exclaimed the property master, with exasperating affability, "Why, guv'nor, what was your words to me this morning? 'No pegs.' And there ain't none!"—London Tit-Bits.

LACROSSE

Lacrosse has never occupied a very prominent niche in the attention of the general public. Indications are, however, that the summer of 1901 is advancing the sport considerably.

Colleges have as a rule been the chief supporters of lacrosse, although many of the big athletic clubs have put out teams.

In the recent intercollegiate championship contest at Hoboken, N. J., the lacrosse team of Stevens institute of Hoboken captured premier honors by defeating Harvard.

Canada is the home of lacrosse. The crack Toronto team now in the United States is superior to any aggregation that we can produce. During the summer a team of Canadian Indian lacrosse players will tour the United States.

Lacrosse, as played by the Canadian Indians, is strenuous in the extreme. Their feats of endurance are nothing short of phenomenal.

The News Review for the news.

Set For the Wrong Time.

He works in a down town office for a gruff old chap who has no love for laggards. He is due at 8 sharp, but as he likes to be out o' nights he never wakes up a moment too soon. He has an alarm clock, which he sets at 7, and this gives him barely time to dress, breakfast and reach the office.

One day last week, the man having forgotten to wind his clock the night before, it didn't go off. So there were explanations to be made about 8:30 a. m. This was the excuse:

"Well, you see, Mr. Gruff, I know how punctual you like all of your men to be, so I have an alarm clock, which I set for 7 in the morning. But, by mistake, I set it for 7 in the evening last night, and of course it didn't go off at 7 in the morning today, as usual. And I overslept myself."

"Ah, you did? Well, I'll excuse you this time. But set it properly after this."

And now the chap is wondering whether or not "the old man" was really fooled or merely wanted to let him down easy. Perhaps he thinks the boss believes he has a 24 hour clock.—Kansas City Journal.

Bull Baiting.

Although bull baiting was a cruel pastime, it was also a fulfilling of the law, for formerly no butcher was allowed to offer for sale the flesh of any bull that had not been baited. The goading of the animal in a fury was supposed to have some influence on the flesh. In a similar belief the flesh of a hunted hare was thought to be superior in flavor to that of one that had been shot, and a present of "a hunted hare" was considered to be a special compliment. In the records of the corporation of Leicester, England, the following order appears: "At a common hall, held on Thursday before St. Simon and St. Jude, 1467, 'no butcher to kill a bull till baited.'" At Winchester it was ordered (thirtieth Henry VIII) "that from hensforth ther shal be no bulstake set before any mayor's dore to bayte any bull, but onlie at the bull-ringe within the saide cytie."

The Perplexed Juror.

A man was being tried in New South Wales for stealing a watch. The evidence was conflicting, and the jury made up their minds to retire, but before they left the hall the judge remarked that if there were any points on which they required information he would be pleased to assist them. Eleven of the jurymen had left the box, but the twelfth remained standing, with his eyes fixed downward, as if absorbed in thought.

"Well, sir," said the judge, "is there any question you would like to ask me before you retire?"

"I would like to know, my lord," came the reply, "if you could tell us whether the prisoner stole the watch."

There are so many poor grammarians that we wonder grammar is not more unpopular.—Atchison Globe.

OUR BOARD OF TRADE.

The right note was struck by President Croxall and other speakers at the board of trade meeting last evening and a degree of earnestness and willingness to work for the city's welfare and advancement manifested that augurs well for the future usefulness of that body. All that is now needed is more volunteers who are willing to work for their own interests and those of the public. We believe that they will come forward, now that it is made plain that we have a working board of trade and that there is every prospect that it will have plenty to occupy its attention.

Those who hesitate and doubt should look at the facts. The mere published announcement that the East Liverpool board of trade had reorganized and proposed to encourage the establishment of new industries has already borne fruit. Several propositions from manufacturers seeking a location for new works have already come to the secretary and more are almost sure to come from time to time. This is a busy, prosperous period, and if this city is to get its share of the new establishments constantly springing up all over the country, it must have a board of trade to point out the advantages offered by the city and to at least make it apparent that the town is alive and wants to grow and will welcome and encourage those who are willing to invest money here and add to its industries.

There should be no thought of giving up the work now well begun. Some discouragement is inevitable in any venture; but we don't believe the men in the board of trade are such as to be dismayed by little dashes of cold water. There is work ahead, and work that will count if rightly done. When the board of trade membership numbers hundreds, instead of scores as at present, with each member a committee of one looking out for opportunities to benefit East Liverpool, the work will be easier for all interested. That time will come if the proper earnestness and determination to make the board of trade a big, permanent and progressive body, is manifested now.

DISFRANCHISING THE NEGRO.

Following the example set by other southern states, Alabama is about to hold a constitutional convention for the avowed purpose of disfranchising the negro. Senator Morgan does not mince matters as the object sought, and he recommends a plan which he thinks would be effectual. He proposes that boards of registers be established in every county, to which all voters must apply for certificates setting forth their qualifications and right to vote. The board is to examine the would-be voter and pass on the general question as to whether he is worthy to be admitted to the electorate, and its power is to be full and unrestricted. It is provided that a rejected applicant can appeal to the circuit court, which will have the same general power to say whether or not the applicant is worthy. The plan also proposes to confine the right to hold office rigidly to the white man.

The purpose is nullification of the fifteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, and is the boldest and most shameless of all the schemes concocted in the southern states for disfranchising the colored man, however intelligent he may be, and allowing the white man, however ignorant, all the rights of citizenship. And yet Morgan and others like him profess the most virtuous indignation when any northerner ventures to suggest that the negro is not treated just as he ought to be in the south.

The News Review gives its readers in every issue more and better reading matter than is furnished by any other local paper. The intelligent public is not overlooking that fact, either, as the growth of subscription lists and advertising patronage fully demonstrates.

GLEANINGS OF A DAY

In and About

THE LOCAL POTTERIES

President Hughes returned from Ford City last evening, where he has been in conference with the management of the pottery there looking to the reorganization of its working force on the first of July.

President Hughes reports that affairs in connection with the organizing of the various departments were favorable, and that the change would be made as scheduled.

A number of jobs that have been vacant have been filled by Brotherhood members, and they are receiving the scale of wages which prevail throughout the west. There will be fewer changes than was at first contemplated. The measuring of kilns has already been commenced and will be continued as the kilns become emptied until the figures are all secured. The uniform list will go into effect in every department of the plant on July 1.

At the meeting of local union No. 29, dishmakers, held last evening, the semi-annual election of officers was held, resulting as follows: President, George Rumberger; vice president, Robert White; recording secretary, Everett Rose; financial secretary, Joseph Heckathorn; treasurer, Samuel Thomas; statistician, Charles C. Adams; inspector, Joseph Cartwright; inside guard, Charles Cain; trustee, for 18 minths, James Heckathorn; members of entertainment committee, George Rumberger and Robert White.

At Sebring, Wednesday, Miller Cochran, a kilnman at the Oliver China works, while at the top of a kiln and in the act of putting a cover on the top of a sagger, struck it against a protruding brick which came against Miller and cut a deep gash in his face and broke his nose.

Alfred Walker, a well known potter of Trenton died this week. Mr. Walker was in the forty-fourth year of his age, and leaves a widow and five children. He was the brother-in-law of Assemblyman George Page. The cause of death was consumption.

Miss Kate O'Hara, a finisher at the E. M. Knowles plant at Chester, who has been off duty for several weeks on account of illness, is again able to be out and will resume her duties in a few days.

D. Wheatley will leave Wallace & Chetwynd's Thursday, where he has had charge of the decorating department, and on Friday will take hold of the same work at Brunt's.

Joseph McKenna will resign his position as handler at the Thompson plant and will go to Salem, where he has accepted a position with the Salem China company.

It is stated that the contract for the erection of the Aaron China works has been let and that work on the building will be commenced July 8.

Harry Hunter will resign his position at the Brunt pottery Saturday, and will go to Salem where he expects to secure employment.

George Fowler has returned from an extended trip in the east and has secured employment at Laughlin No. 1.

C. Linders has resigned his place at the Thompson pottery and taken one with an ice company.

Miss Julia Hickey has resigned her position as finisher at the E. M. Knowles pottery at Chester.

John Marshall has resigned his position at the Sevres China plant, and accepted one at the East Liverpool.

Frank Woodburn has resigned his position as jiggerman at the E. M. Knowles pottery.

The Thompson pottery yesterday started work on the foundation for the new boiler.

The Brunt pottery yesterday started to work on their new dinner set.

SALARIES FIXED

ANR CURFEW LAW PASSED BY CHESTER COUNCIL.

Mayor And Recorder Get $10 a Month Each And Police Chief $35, With Fees.

The Chester council held a brief session last evening, at which a few more laws were enacted and one old one repealed. All the members were present except Mayor Dunn.

The most important ordinance passed was the salary law, which fixed the compensation of the mayor at $10 per month and fees, the recorder's salary at $10 per month and the sergeant's pay at $25 per month and fees.

The proposition to put another policeman on the force was also discussed, but no action was taken.

The discussion of the cane rack ordinance occupied considerable time, Solicitor O. S. Marshall explaining that the law did not regard a cane rack as a game of chance, but a game of science, consequently all that could be done was to impose a license. Some of the solons wanted the cane rack prohibited altogether.

The ordinance imposing a special tax of $10 per annum on drug stores was repealed and a new ordinance making the tax $5 was passed.

A curfew ordinance was passed, imposing a fine of from $1 to $20 upon children of both sexes under the age of 14 years who were found on the streets after 9 o'clock in the winter months and 10 o'clock in the summer months, unless in charge of an adult. The last law enacted prohibited loitering and loafing on the street corners and public highways and imposed a fine of from $1 to $20 for violation of the same.

SMALLPOX SCARE

NEW CUMBERLAND REPORTS A GENUINE CASE THERE.

House Quarantined — Disease Thought to Have Come from Old Clothes.

Word reached Chester this afternoon that New Cumberland was greatly excited over what is said to be a genuine case of smallpox.

The informant stated that the fact had just become known, as he was about to leave New Cumberland, and he could not learn the patient's name, but that the house was quarantined and the doctors had pronounced the disease smallpox.

It was supposed that the disease germs had been carried in some clothes which were in a box washing machine, which had been caught in the river during the flood.

COUNTY COURT

Convenes Next Monday—Tax Levy to Be Fixed—Congo Ferry Trouble.

County court convenes at New Cumberland next Monday. This is regarded as the most important session of the year, as the tax levy is then decided upon. The question of a steam ferry at Congo will also come up at this session.

It will be remembered that the court granted a franchise to W. S. Johnson, giving a landing for a ferry at Congo. The franchise provided that the ferry should be a steam boat. Johnson is running a flat held to its place by a cable and the citizens will ask the court to revoke the franchise or compel Mr. Johnson to run a steam ferry.

NOT ADMITTED

Rock Springs Team Denies That East Liverpool Motormen Beat It.

The Rock Springs Railway team is very indignant over the statement made by the East Liverpool motormen club to the effect that the former team was defeated at Columbian park Tuesday. They say that only two of their team played and that the remainder of the team was made up of boys from the East End.

They further state that they refused to play because the grounds were covered with grass and the park gate keeper wanted to charge the visiting team an admission fee, presumably, they say, to have the grass mowed down. They are willing to stake money that they can beat the East Liverpool motormen on any good grounds.

ADJUDGED INSANE

Holliday's Cove Woman to Be Taken to Weston Asylum.

Sheriff C. F. Allison left this morning for Holliday's Cove, from which place he will take Mrs. Charles Truax to the asylum at Weston.

Mrs. Truax has been suffering from mental derangement for more than a year and was recently adjudged insane.

FIVE-INNING GAME.

Played at Rock Springs Grounds Yesterday.

A five-inning game of baseball was played at Rock Springs yesterday between the employes of the amusement features at the park and those connectied with the pavilion. The former team won by a score of 13-8. Batteries—Amusement team, Rigby and Dorff; pavilion club, Allison and Smith. The features of the game were the pitching of Dorff, who struck out 12 of his opponents, and the kicking of "Shorty" Bailey, who played short for the pavilion people.

Chelsea Plant to Start.

A carload of clay was received at the Chelsea plant in New Cumberland yesterday, and it thus becomes certain that this pottery is to be placed in operation. The Chelsea is one of the most modern and best equipped plants in the country and when running will employ about 300 hands. No ware has been made in this pottery for about four years, although many attempts have been made to start it. It is now in new hands and the residents of New Cumberland are jubilant over the fact that it will soon be running in full.

Peddlers Arraigned.

Two rug peddlers were arrigned before Mayor Dunn at his home this morning, charged with peddling without license. They produced a state license and were released.

CHESTER NEWS IN BRIEF.

The ladies of the M. E. church are making extensive preparations for a church bazaar to be held in O. O. Allison's new store building on Friday week.

Jack Tinson left yesterday for Cleveland where he has accepted a position with a street car company. His family will move to that city soon.

COLUMBIANA SCHOOLS

Several Vacancies in the Corps of Teachers—School Population.

Columbiana, June 7.—Charles L. Grosjean and Miss Blanche A. Miller, teachers in the A grammar grade and intermediate departments, respectively, of the schools here, have not applied for re-election to those positions. The board of education will probably choose their successors at the next meeting to be held Monday evening, June 17. No teacher has yet been elected for room No. 4 in the intermediate department.

An enumeration of the school youth here shows that there are 341 persons of that age in this special union school district, 181 males and 160 females. There were 365 last year.

RIGHTS ALL SECURED

And the Panhandle Extension to Monaca Will Soon Be Begun.

Attorney J. B. Somerville, of Wheeling, W. Va., was in Chester and East Liverpool yesterday afternoon, on business in connection with the extension of the Panhandle railroad to Georgetown.

Mr. Somerville is attorney for the Pennsylvania company for this division. He refused to state just when the work on the extension would begin, but said that rights of way had all been secured and that it was probable that the road would be extended on through to Monaca, and joined with the line of the Pennsylvania company at that point at no very distant date.

JOURNEYMEN BARBERS

Will Meet Monday Night For the Purpose of Organizing.

A meeting of the journeymen barbers has been arranged for next Monday evening, at which time it is thought an organization will be formed.

The meeting will be held at Moser's shop on East Market street, and a good attendance is promised. A number of attempts have been made in the past to form an organization, but on each occasion the effort has been unsuccessful.

Murder Trial Begun.

sired in the way of increasing their membership. The committee at present is composed of the following: J. W. Gipner, D. A. Devine, C. A. Ferguson, J. N. Hanley, Willis Davidson and G. Y. Travis.

It is the intention of the committee to make a renewed effort to push the project to a successful finish, and judging from the encouragement received last night from substantial business men, it is believed the proposition will be carried through.

The secretary stated that he had received a proposition from a large manufacturing concern, asking for a bonus of $250,000. He said it would be useless to say anything concerning its nature, as it seemed a hard matter to get people sufficiently interested to raise stock of one-tenth that amount for the glass house.

On motion it was decided to appoint a committee to canvass the city for the purpose of increasing the membership of the board of trade. David McLane, Joseph Betz and Dr. Calhoun were appointed. The meeting then adjourned.

Y. M. C. A. WORK PROSPEROS.

Biennial Report Made Public of Arrangements Committee For Coming Jubilee.

Boston, June 7.—The committee of arrangements for the jubilee Y. M. C. A. convention, June 11 to 16, made public the biennial report of the international committee, R. C. Morse, New York, secretary. In substance it was as follows:

The work in the Philippines has produced excellent results, winning the confidence and esteem of the civil officers, as well as those of the army and navy.

In co-operation with the provinical committee of Ontario and Quebec, three representatives were sent with the detachment of Canadian troops serving in South Africa.

At Cavite, P. I., the authorities have granted the use of a building, and this has been fitted up by the committee and a very helpful work is being prosecuted.

In the last two years the number of railroad associations has increased from 137 to 161. There are 648 student associations.

The work of the business department committee has greatly enlarged and the number of doners has increased from 2,000 to 6,000.

Organizations now extend from the northern border of Mexico to Skagway and Cape Nome, above the Arctic circle.

The colored men's department enters upon its work in the new century with 81 associations, 62 of which are among students and 21 among cities.

The statement of the treasurer shows that the receipts during the last fiscal year were $136,839 for home work; publication accouns were $81,937; foreign work, $39,320. The number of men in the work officially are 1,522.

WAR ON GOTHAM VICE.

Committee of 15 Raids Resumed—Arrests and Evidence Secured.

New York, June 7.—Committee of fifteen raids were resumed through Justice Jerome, Colonel Robert Grier Monroe and Superintendent McCullagh. The Germania assembly rooms, in the Bowery, were raided without a prisoner being made, and No. 109 West Thirty-seventh street was also raided. This place, according to Superintendent McCullagh, is run by Frank Farrell, and he also says that Frank Burbridge, a western man, is a partner of Farrell. One prisoner was made in the Thirty-seventh street rooms. Justice Jerome intimated strongly that the Bowery raid was tipped off by the police.

When Justice Jerome and his party reached the place they found it in confusion and the door locked and barricaded. Tehy kicked the door and smashed it in. A hundred men were found in the room, but not one of the six who were wanted was there. Justice Jerome and the others picked up a soap box full of articles for evidence, consisting of racing cards, racing slips, etc.

The raid on the Thirty-seventh street house was made under the direction of Robert L. Woolley, of the committee of fifteen. Superintendent McSullagh's deputies had to break their way in. They found men escaping and men inside. A man who jumped to the ground from a window was arrested. Of the men inside one was arrested. Both were released. A quantity of pool room material was seized by the raiders as evidence.

THE LUTHERAN SYNOD.

Some Reports Were Read, Including That of Deaconess Board.

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—The closing day of the forty-third general synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church was yesterday. Many reports were read, including that of the deaconess board, the Sunday school board, common service and temperance committees.

The Rev. E. J. Wolfe, of Gettysburg, Pa., submitted a revised report on the condition of the church, which was adopted in place of the first report, which aroused a storm of protests from the delegates earlier in the week.

Discussion of the proposed abandonment of missionary work in Africa, and the devotion of the African fund to work among the negroes of this country continued. Considerable opposition developed in spite of the committee's report to the effect that the only effect of many years' work in Africa was a coffee field and a cemetery.

MOIR NO LONGER RECORDER.

His Resignation Accepted and W. L. Connell Appointed.

Harrisburg, June 7.—W. L. Connell of Scranton, was appointed recorder of Scranton by Governor Stone, to cucceed James Moir, resigned. The resignation of Recorder Moir was received in the governor's morning mail Thursday and was promptly accepted and his successor appointed.

Mr. Moir was Scranton's first recorder under the second class city charter, commonly known as the Pittsburg ripper. He was appointed by the governor on the day on which the bill was signed. Under the act the executive is empowered to remove the recorder at his pleasure.

The Municipal league, of Scranton, made formal application to the governor last Saturday for the recorder's dismissal. A hearing was to have been given both sides, but the resignation made this unnecessary, and the whole matter has been dropped.

POLITICAL MATTERS

In addition to the opposition which Senator George W. Sieber will meet from Ashtabula county in the person of Hon. C. W. Harris, says an Akron special to the Ohio State Journal, he will have an opponent from his own county of Summit before the senatorial convention of the combined Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth districts, which meets at Cleveland June 22. Hon. J. Park Alexander, whom Senator Sieber defeated for a renomination two years ago, announced that he would be a candidate and his friends immediately set to work putting up slates.

At the Republican senatorial convention of the Twenty-seventh and Twenty-ninth joint district, composed of Ashland, Medina, Lorain and Richland counties, held at Medina, two candidates were placed before the convention for nomination for senator, George H. Chamberlain, of Lorain, and Colonel D. L. Cochley, of Shelby. Mr. Chamberlain was nominated on the first ballot, having received 101 votes, and Mr. Cochley 98. Good feeling prevailed.

Down in Brown county John Peddicord is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for recorder, and his daughter, Stephanie, is campaigning the county in his interests. She is an excellent wheelwoman, and mounted upon her bicycle is making a thorough canvass of the county. Besides she has a very effective way of presenting her father's claims.

The Democratic common pleas judge fight was settled at Ashland on the thirty-sixth ballot by the nomination of L. C. Mengert, of Mansfield. Morrow county voted for L. K. Powell, of Mt. Gilead, on every ballot except one, when H. E. Bell, of Mansfield, got her full vote.

The Licking county Republican convention for the nomination of a county ticket and the selection of state, judicial and senatorial delegates will be held at Newark on the 22d inst.

A Happy Foot.

The custom of wishing a friend "a happy foot" is to be found in all parts of Europe, and it goes to show how much superstition is connected with our footgear. It is to be assumed that the well fitting boot or shoe, which enables a person to walk in comfort, is symbolical of happiness.

The accidental placing of the right shoe on the left foot, putting a shoe on awry or the breaking of a lace is a bad sign from the popular point of view. To tie the shoe of another individual is indicative of humility and lowly position, yet the Chinese worship the shoes of an upright judge.

There is a curious superstition in some parts of England which advises that when the youngest daughter marries before her sisters the latter should dance at her wedding without shoes in order to insure husbands for themselves. On St. Valentine's eve, according to a similar custom, girls should hang their shoes outside the window if they wish to secure lovers.

Some actresses carefully preserve the boots they wore when they scored their first success and wear them on all important occasions.

Got More For the Money.

A gentleman living in a rural part of England sent his coachman to a neighboring village for 5 shillings' worth of penny stamps.

After a time John returned from his tramp of two miles.

His face wore a self satisfied look when he came into his employer's presence.

"Got the stamps, John?"

"Yes, sir," the man replied, handing over a batch of halfpenny stamps.

"I said penny stamps, John, and you have got halfpenny ones."

"Yes, sir," and the smile widened. "I asked for 5 shillings' worth of stamps, an the postmaster says, 'Halfpenny or penny?' 'Do you sell halfpenny stamps?' I asked. 'Yes,' said he. 'Well,' says I, 'if you can buy stamps for a halfpenny, what's the use of payin a penny?' An I bought the halfpenny stamps, sir."—London Telegraph.

Thrift In Children.

A savings bank account is a great incentive to thrift in children. If one is begun for the baby, even with a very small sum, and added through childhood and youth with a certain proportion of the money that otherwise would be spent carelessly and thoughtlessly by the child, there will be a very respectable amount on the credit side of the ledger when the depositor is 18 years old. The habit of self denial is not the least of the substantial benefits that follow a wise economy of money.—Exchange.

A WRETCHED MONARCH.

Some Facts About the Mad King Otto's Life.

DISEASE MAKING RAPID PROGRESS.

He Will Not Take Proper Treatment and Sings For Hours at Night—Falls Asleep Only Toward Dawn—Tortured With Fear, He Refuses to Eat.

According to reports from Munich, the condition of the insane King Otto, who some days ago celebrated his fifty-third birthday, has again become somewhat critical, the renal disease from which he suffers making all the more rapid progress as the unhappy monarch, who is exceedingly strong, will not let himself be examined or treated, writes the London correspondent of the New York Sun. As he cannot be induced to take the necessary diet and baths which would increase the activity of the heart efforts are made to introduce secretly into his food medicaments to prevent chronic inflammation of the arteries and dropsy. Sometimes, in order to rouse him, he is allowed to see persons whom he once knew and whose features he remembers from his boyhood. These he at once recognizes, calling them by their names. He dines, smokes and plays with them for some time and then suddenly breaks off, becomes apathetic, pulls at his beard and then commences to undress himself just where he is.

The king rises very irregularly. Sometimes, according to his mood, he tosses himself about in bed till late in the day, rolls himself up in the bedclothes and then throws them off with his feet or hands. There are days when he cannot be induced to leave his bed or his room, and as exercise is necessary for this strong and lately very stout man everything possible is done to get him out into the park or at least on to the terrace.

There are also days when the king is tortured with fear and cannot be prevailed upon to eat anything. At these times when his breakfast is brought in he peeps slyly at the lackeys, who wait on him with as much ceremony as if he were sane. At other times, when he is hungry and wants to eat, he does not wait till they have left the room, but pounces on everything on the table ravenously. But generally he waits till the lackeys have gone and then eats everything up. When the servants reappear and find the empty dishes, the king laughs heartily. Owing to his complete want of exercise he suffers from sleeplessness. At night he sits for hours in his room, sometimes talking aloud to himself, sometimes singing, in a beautiful voice, and only toward morning falls asleep.

Great stress is laid at Castle Furstenried on the same ceremony and treatment being given for the sick king as if he were in good health. However curious it may sound, it seems as if the king himself takes care that he should receive royal attentions. He notices exactly what goes on around him, and when he is to be induced by stratagem to do anything, for instance, if he is wanted to take a drive, the doctors must never betray their intention, for then the king offers such resistance and gets so furious that doctors and attendants have quickly to retire. But if he can be made to believe that he can outwit his doctors and make fools of them he does what is wanted. In order to get him into the carriage to take a drive the following maneuver is resorted to: The carriage drives up to the gate of the garden and is apparently left alone there. As soon as the king thinks he is not watched he jumps into the carriage and calls for the coachman without being in the least astonished at seeing his doctor follow him into it.

Mr. Stedman to Write an Ode.

Edmund Clarence Stedman has been selected to write the commemorative ode for the Yale bicentennial next October. Justice David J. Brewer of the United States supreme court will deliver the commemorative oration.

Now Once Again.

Now once again the jaybird sings
Its ragtime carols to the jays,
And rustic barnyard loudly rings
With speckled hen's exultant lays.
Again we hear the merry bark
Of yonder spreading dogwood trees,
And meadow larks go on a lark
And whistle at the passing breeze,
And, mopping his perspiring brow,
The hired man chases up the plow.

Now once again we hear the hum
Of busy bees that feed us honey,
And fakirs to the country come
To part the granger from his money.
The placid meadow brooks again
Have got their babbling habit on,
And rustic poets seize the pen
And roll their eyes like dying fawn
And, fanned by a gentle muse's wing,
Indite their lyrics to the spring.

Now once again adown the lane,
Beneath the moonlight on the farm,
John Henry and his Mary Jane
In love's young dream stroll arm in arm.
They do not whisper words of love,
But speak them out in accents clear,
Because, 'neath yonder skies above,
There's no one but the cows to hear,
And oft explodes a hearty kiss
That sounds as popgun charged with bliss.

Now once again the bullfrog sits
And bellows at the rising moon,
And through the air the black bat flits,
And tree toads get their pipes in tune,
And from their birthplace farm wives swipe
The eggs the fruitful hens have laid,
Selecting those too overripe
To take to stores in town to trade
For anything they think is nice
And is a bargain at the price.

Now once again we soon will fly
Unto those rural scenes so gay
On our vacation, you and I,
To while a slice of time away.
All through the day we'll sit and roast
And fight mosquitoes through the night
And then return and proudly boast
Of rural pleasures out of sight,
Our faces tanned an Injun black,
Our cash blown into Reuben's sack.

A STORY OF BABYLON.

Reginald De Koven's Wife Has Just Published a Mystical Romance.

"By the Waters of Babylon" is the title of a strange, mystical, historical romance that has just been published by Mrs. Reginald De Koven, the wife of the popular composer of light operas. In some respects the novel promises to be the literary sensation of the season, for it is entirely different from any of the books that have preceded it in public favor.

According to Mrs. De Koven, "By the Waters of Babylon" has to do with the captive Jews and is a historical and archæological stury of a period never before used in romance. Its plot is made up of the historical material found in the ancient histories and in the mass of bas-relief and cuneiform tablets recovered from the ruins of the buried cities of Babylonia and Assyria. But it seems to be dramatic in its treatment, and the information is always subordinated to the interests of the plot. "By the Waters of Babylon" is not, therefore, a mere stirring up of dry historical bones, but a living, breathing tale of human interest and dramatic intensity.

Mrs. De Koven has been collecting material for her novel for a number of years and has had the assistance of some of the leading archæologists of America in her researches. This is not her first venture in authorship. Several years ago she published a novel called "A Sawdust Doll." She has also made a translation of one of Pierre Loti's novels that has gained great praise for its literary excellence.

Before her marriage to Mr. De Koven the author of "By the Waters of Babylon" was one of the leading society belles of Chicago. They were wedded in 1887. Mrs. De Koven was born in Chicago and is the eldest of the three beautiful daughters of ex-Senator Charles B. Farwell. She has had the advantage of the highest education and of foreign travel and is a woman of rare brilliance. Until a short time ago the De Kovens lived in New York. Their home was distinguished as the gathering place of a coterie of some of the most brilliant minds of Gotham's literary, artistic and musical circles. The composer of "Robin Hood" and his wife now reside in Washington, where they are equally popular.

AN HONORED AMERICAN.

Siam Chooses a Yankee to Represent Her In the Arbitration Court.

To an American has been given the honor of representing Siam at the international court of arbitration. The American thus distinguished is Frederick W. Holls of New York. At the present time Mr. Holls is engaged in a sightseeing tour of Europe.

Mr. Holls will be remembered as the secretary of the American delegation to the peace conference held at The Hague in 1899. One of the results of that meeting was the establishment of a permanent court of arbitration. It is to this that Mr. Holls is to act as Siam's delegate.

Frederick William Holls is a lawyer by profession, but he has also gained laurels as a scholar, an author and a traveler. He is a native of Pennsylvania and is 44 years old. He was educated at Columbia university and in the Columbia Law school. In 1880 Mr. Holls was admitted to the New York bar, and he has been in active practice since.

LOCOMOTIVE TRUST'S HEAD

Ex-President of the New York Central Has Risen From the Ranks.

"It was a matter of money with me," said Mr. Samuel R. Callaway when explaining his recent acceptance of the presidency of the American Locomotive company at a salary of $50,000 a year. "I have been a salaried man all my life, and I felt it due to my family to make the best of my opportunities. I have never speculated; am just a plain plodder." It is not at all likely, however, that Mr. Callaway's family would have suffered had he not accepted the offer of the presidency of "the locomotive trust," since his salary as president of the New York Central railroad has been $50,000 a year.

The American Locomotive company, to head which Mr. Callaway has been taken from the New York Central, is the newly organized corporation that will control about two-thirds of the output of locomotives in the United States. It is capitalized at $50,000,000 and has taken over all of the large works with the exception of the Baldwin. The new "trust" will have an average daily output of seven complete locomotives.

Few people who know him will agree with Mr. Callaway's modest estimate of himself as "just a plain plodder" unless "plodding" means an infinite capacity for work. It is said that in the three years or so that Mr. Callaway has been president of the Central he has done work that before his advent required two vice presidents and a general manager. He leaves the Central with only the most cordial of feelings. The Vanderbilts, who control that system, are also largely interested in the American Locomotive company.

The new president of the locomotive "trust" is a Canadian by birth and is 51 years of age. At 14 he entered the service of the Grand Trunk railroad at Montreal as an office boy. Promotion came to him rapidly, for he is eminently fitted by nature to attend to routine matters as well as those of greater importance. He worked his way up through the various grades and in 1869 became chief clerk to the superintendent of the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad. Since then he has held a number of important railroad positions, always advancing.

JAPAN'S EMPRESS A POET.

In Her Verses Haruko Shows Her Sympathy For the Working Classes.

However well I am wrapped with silk and brocade
The thought of the poor, who have even no sleeves
To shield them against the cold,
Comes into my mind. Ah!

Thus runs the translation of a Japanese poem whose author is no other than the occupant of a throne. Like her sister sovereign, Carmen Sylva, queen of Roumania, the empress of Japan has taken to authorship. The empress' writings have taken the form of verse. In her stanzas she expresses her deep feeling for those of less wealth and lower station. Like most oriental poetry, the verses of the empress are in the form of quatrains, each embodying a single thought. Most of them are remarkable for the deep ethical sentiment that pervades them, and earnest seekers find in them evidences that the writer is imbued with the spirit and teachings of Christianity.

It has long been known that the empress of Japan is a woman of a very charitable disposition. Whenever an occasion of suffering in her own country is brought to her attention, she is unsparing in her measures of relief. She is greatly interested in the hospitals of Japan and is chief patroness of the national Red Cross.

PANIC THURSDAY TALES.

Philadelphia Woman Refuses Her $100,000 "Nipper" Profit.

TROUBLED BY HER CONSCIENCE.

Her Broker Puzzled as to How the Case May Be Adjusted—Absent Northern Pacific Shareholder Misses a Million—Costly Dinner Temper of a Dowager.

Although the excitement over the cornering of Northern Pacific has died down, stories of the fortunes that might have been keep coming in from all parts of the United States. One of the most remarkable of all the tales comes from Philadelphia.

It seems that a woman over there owned 200 shares of the stock, bought years ago when the stock was selling below par. The stock was located by somebody in New York, and on the morning of panic Thursday she was advised to sell and realize a handsome profit on her investment. She thought the matter over for awhile and concluded to follow the advice. The stock was sold at 600, and in course of time the woman received a check for $120,000. The transaction presented a profit of considerably more than $100,000.

Between the time she authorized the sale of the stock and the time she received the check the woman read about the panic and the corner and the great losses they had caused. Her conscience fell to work, and she concluded that the profit she had received might have come from somebody whose fortune had been wrecked. She refused to accept the check. Returning it, she said it was too great a profit to be made on such a transaction and that she felt that she would be guilty of great wrongdoing if she accepted the check. The broker through whom the stock was sold still has the check and is at a loss at present to know just how the trouble which the woman's conscience has occasioned can be adjusted.

The real thing in the way of a Northern Pacific hard luck story is told on a member of one of the largest mercantile houses in New York who married into one of the richest families in the United States. He has been abroad for some time past, but has been where he could keep in touch with what was going on in New York through the foreign newspapers. A few days ago he noticed in the papers that an attempt was being made to corner Northern Pacific and that the price of the stock had gone kiting. He had 4,000 shares and concluded to sell at once. Accordingly he cabled to his New York brokers to sell him out at the market. They tried to execute the order when the stock was up around 400 or 500. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were ready to take the stock, but the brokers had no power of attorney under which the stock could be transferred. Although the responsibility of the brokers to their principal was not doubted for a moment, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were taking no chances in those times, therefore the stock was not sold, and the owner lost not far from $1,000,000 profit, says the New York Sun.

When the world was being combed for the stock in the days immediately preceding the panic, it was learned that a certain fashionable New York dowager was the possessor of something like 400 shares. The stock was bought years ago by her late husband, when a bushel of shares could be obtained for a song, and not much of a song at that. The other evening a broker called up the woman's residence on the telephone. He learned that she was at a dinner party and got the name of her hostess on the plea of highly important business. The hostess had a telephone, and the broker finally succeeded in getting the dowager to it. He told her that her stock was wanted, that she could realize a small fortune by selling and asked if he might sell the stock. The reply he got was:

"This is the greatest piece of impertinence I have ever heard of. You have actually called me from a dinner party to discuss a matter of business. Please be good enough never to annoy me like this again."

Then she hung up the receiver, and the broker as he hung up his said to himself what he wouldn't say to a lady. He seemed to have a very definite idea of a locality where she might spend the summer for all he cared. Later he had the satisfaction of knowing that the dowager regretted more than she will ever be able to tell that she didn't sell the stock.

A few weeks ago a yachtsman known almost as well on the other side of the ocean as on this was advised to buy United States Steel common. "All right," said he to the man who gave the advice. "I'll buy it when it can be bought at 25. I'd like some at that price, and you can take my order now for 500 shares to be executed when you can buy the stock at that figure."

The stock was then selling around 50, and the broker laughed at the order, but said he would execute it if he ever got the chance. Shortly before noon on Thursday 1,800 shares of United States Steel common were sold at 25, and 500 of those shares were bought for the yachtsman.

DRESS AND FASSION

THE DAY OF THE HORSE AND THE HORSEWOMAN HAS COME AGAIN.

Present Fashions In Habits, Including Those of Little Folk—The Hat and the Coiffure—Summer Modifications of the Styles.

Did anybody remark that the horse has had his day? Of course the horse really has had his day. In fact, he's had several kinds of day, and the latest one, thanks to the bicycle, was a day off. Just at present, however, the horse has jumped back into fashion again. He is simply getting there with both feet and both pairs of feet.

It is a fact that there are shoals of men, women, children and girls riding this spring. The girls are mentioned separately because there are so many of them and because they catch and hold the eye more than any other variety of equestrian. Sometimes, alas, the spectator's eye seems to be about the only thing they do catch and hold, says the New York Sun in pleasant preface to some very practical information and sketches apropos of the new fashion.

Here are the rules and regulations for the riding habit, feminine gender, present tense and grown up person: The hat is a round crowned black derby, with a rubber going under the hair in the back. The doing up of the hair, by the way, is one of the most vital problems to the woman rider. Pompadours and artistic disorder are out of the question. Five minutes' riding will make a girl who goes in for artistic disorder in hairdressing look like a Yorkshire terrier.

Middle aged women do their hair in a knot at the back of their head, anchoring this knot by means of kinky hairpins. But younger women revert to their girlhood days, braid their hair in a tail, turn it up and tie it with a ribbon bow at the nape of the neck.

The riding habit which seems to be most satisfactory to the experienced horsewoman is of black cheviot. The skirt is made of the length which has now superseded the old flowing death traps. It buttons all the way up from hem to band with safety buttons, so that if the rider is thrown or the saddle turns and the skirt catches these buttons rip open and let her fall free instead of being dragged.

The once popular basque with the postilion back is absolutely out of style now. The proper thing is what is called the English coat. This is cut straight around, rather full in the skirts, which vary in length from 6 or 8 to 12 or 14 inches. With this coat is worn a white stock and ascot with a horsy pin.

Young girls and even young women are permitted to wear a norfolk jacket. For girls of, say, 12 to 16 the norfolk is quite the proper thing. Girls of this age, too, may wear colored habits, mixed gray and black or blue. The real little girls wear their soft felt hats set on the back of their heads and with the rubber under their chins. They put on a full skirt, weighted, of course, but not cut in any of the eccentric geometrical angles necessary for the grown up habits.

Gloves are of heavy dark brown dogskin, with welt seams. Crops and whips are about equally in favor.

For warm weather riding, shirt waists and straw hats are perfectly admissible. There are women, however, who don't like to ride in a shirt waist, and they are advised to try heavy linen habits, made exactly like one of cloth. These habits are unlined and are not starched when done up. They are ironed when wet.

THE SMALL FRY.

The really swell girl who rides at the academy considers the appearance she must make in transit, so to speak, as well as when she is actually riding. That is to say, she wants to have the proper coat to wear on the street. The long raglans or variations of raglans have been a godsend to her this season.

COACHING IN FAVOR

REMARKABLE REVIVAL OF THIS SPIRITED SPORT IS IN PROGRESS.

Country Around New York, Owing to Its Good Roads, the Coacher's Paradise — European Coaching Trips Now Possible.

In spite of the threatened extinction of the horse through the introduction of the automobile, the ancient and honorable sport of coaching is holding its own among those who have the time and money to indulge in it. There seems to be something that makes a peculiar appeal to the human heart in the spectacle of a great, finely decorated coach drawn by a number of spirited, swift horses and driven by a man who knows the delicate art of handling the reins. Very frequently, too, of recent years "society" women have shown that underneath the fair tinted skin of their hands and wrists lay muscles possessing sufficient power to hold the ribbons over the backs of four or even more powerful steeds. Besides affording joy to the spectators, the exhilaration of one's first ride on top of a swiftly moving coach is an experience never to be forgotten. No; coaching is not "going out," and it probably never will as long as men and women continue to love the horse and the ride over good roads on top of a coach.

Of course coaching can be indulged in only where there are good roads, and therefore those interested in it are to be found among the most ardent supporters of the good roads movement. The paradise of coachers in America is New York. Stretching to the north and northeast of the eastern metropolis are a number of splendid hard macadam highways that are especially suited to coaching. Up into Westchester county to the pretty towns along the Hudson is a favorite route. All along the eastern bank of the river, amid beautiful scenery, are located the summer homes of many millionaires, while country clubs abound. Another well liked coaching trip is along the roads leading beside Lond Island sound to Larchmont, Pelham, New Rochelle, etc. Coaching in other sections of the country than that around New York, owing possibly to the reprehensible condition of many of our highways, has not made much headway. When the roads receive their much needed improvement, undoubtedly society in other cities will follow the lead of New York.

A favorite little trip of New York's coaching parties these days is that to the Morris park race course, which is situated in the upper part of the city. On race days the inclosure for carriages and coaches presents a pretty scene, the brilliant toilets of the ladies lending to it color and animation. Coaching parties to the race track and elsewhere have been more popular this season than for some time.

That not alone "society," but the general public as well, is interested in coaching was shown at the recent parade of the Coaching club of New York. Seven handsome four-in-hands drawn by magnificent horses were in line, and they passed through a solid mass of admiring people as they were driven through Central park. This was the first coaching parade for five years and was led by Colonel William Jay, the president of the Coaching club. After the procession Colonel Jay said that it was as successful a parade in point of enthusiasm as the club had ever held.

To meet the demand for a resting place for New York's coaching parties Colonel John Jacob Astor is about to erect a beautiful inn at the junction of Pelham parkway and Williamsbridge road, a few miles out of the crowded part of the city. The new structure, which is to cost $200,000, will be a beautiful building, supplied with the latest improvements.

Not satisfied with coaching in America, enthusiastic followers of the sport are now arranging coaching trips on the other side of the Atlantic. The organization of an international coaching company has recently made it possible for an American going to Europe to order six months in advance the coach in which he wishes to travel between any two points in his journey. It is indeed possible now to arrange an entire trip by coach and to follow it out with absolute certainty. The ultimate end of the new enterprise is the establishment of a series of coaches to carry American tourists from one end of Europe to the other. Preparation of all the details of the trip may be made in advance, even to the ordering of luncheon to be ready on a certain day six months ahead.

GONE TO THE VERGE.

He Thought He Had Reached Friendship's Limit.

This young man is not so confiding as he was, and his ideas of friendship are not so exalted. Yet he takes it philosophically and is willing to place a heavy credit in favor of experience.

"I started in a small way," he tells, "and I had an idea that my business would expand rapidly. But I find a good many leaks and drains. Of course you know Jones. He is my friend and knows about horses. So when my one horse went lame I consulted him as being the one friend I had who, I thought, could help me out.

"'Pretty bad shape,' he said as he looked the nag over. 'Need him on your delivery wagon, don't you?'

"I need him or some other horse and asked Jones what I could get for the lame one. He looked him over, felt his legs, examined his eyes and teeth and finally said that, being a friend of mine, he'd give me $40 for the horse. I took it. That same afternoon he sold the horse for $80, a fact I learned about a week later.

"'Now,' said Jones, 'I'm not the man to leave a friend in a scrape. I'll just rustle around and find you another horse.'

"'Thank you, but keep within a hundred. I can't afford to pay more.'

"Next morning my friend showed up with a horse he told me I could have for $98, though he was really worth more. He was sound, gentle, 7 years old, according to Jones.

"He had bought that horse for $60. He had spavin and ringbone, was knee sprung and 13 years old. So Jones had made $78 off me and left me with one of the worst old crowbaits you ever saw. I'm not saying much about it, for Jones is my friend, you know. But an old codger that buys groceries from me says friendship ceases in a horse dicker."—Detroit Free Press.

The Redcoats.

An incident at the siege of Rouen, in 1591, shows that red was looked upon as the English color, for in mentioning the death of one of the Earl of Essex's captains it is remarked that the Frenchman who shot him got near enough to do so by putting on the red coat of a dead English soldier. In 1643 the king's life guards, as also the queen's and Prince Rupert's, wore red coats.

It Brings Her, Etc.

"What do you do when your wife gets sulky and refuses to talk to you?"

"Why, I begin to praise Mrs. Allgood, across the street, or some other woman I know she detests."

"And that brings her, eh?"

"Yes, it brings her and sometimes everything throwable that happens to be in her reach too."—Salt Lake City Tribune.

HOME AFFAIRS.

Brief Notes of a Personal Nature And of Matters About Town.

Camp Meeting—The A. M. E. church will hold a camp meeting at Columbian park, July 14 to 21.

Hard at It—Six teams were put to work yesterday morning by Contractor McLaughlin, grading the West End ball ground.

Pensions Granted—Among pensions recently granted are: James H. Hemphill, East Liverpool, $8; Peter Davis, Lisbon, $7.

Entertained the Belmont — The young ladies of the high school delightfully entertained the Belmont club boys at Rock Springs yesterday afternoon.

Twelve Feet And Falling — The marks at the wharf this morning registered 12 feet and falling. The Greenwood and Lorena passed up and the Ben Hur down last night and the Virginia will go up tonight. The Enterprise passed down yesterday with a tow.

George Must Pay Costs—Justice McLane has decided that John A. George must pay the costs of his case with the city. The law on the subject clearly defines the reasons by which Mr. George should be held for the costs, and the squire is acting in accordance with the statutes.

Coming Home Improved—Miss Hattie Woodburn, who was injured several years ago by falling into a coal hole on Walnut street, and who has been undergoing treatment in the West Penn hospital at Pittsburg, will be brought to her home in this city tomorrow. She is very much improved.

Asleep on Railroad—A Wellsville man, whose name could not be learned, was found asleep on the tracks of the C. & P. railroad just below the flint mill, last evening, by a party of workmen. The man was badly intoxicated and sat down on the ties to rest himself when he fell asleep. He was placed on a street car and sent home.

Sent to Rusticate—The cow which has been causing so much complaint on Calcutta road has been disposed of. Mrs. Gotham, its owner, still insisted that it was not a nuisance, and that it did nothing more terrible than bawl occasionally, which was quite natural for a cow to do. However, since there had been so many complaints, she concluded to send the animal to the country to board.

Recovered Through Good Nursing—Edward Madow, who has been very ill with fever at the Washington house for several days, is able to be about. The gentleman is a lineman, and has been employed here for the past year. He was nursed during his illness by a number of his companions, to whom the credit is due for his recovery. The young man was in a critical condition for several days.

LESS DEALINGS IN STOCKS.

Some Stocks Showed Strength, but the Tendency Generally Was Reactionary.

New York, June 7.—It developed Thursday, from the smaller volume of the dealings and the lack of support for prices, that Wednesday's operations had resulted in the elimination of a large short interest and that the demand from this source to cover short contracts had been taken advantage of by the bull contingent to realize profits on heavy long lines of stocks. This mutual closing up of accounts had a decided effect on the speculative appetite, and the ushering in of the hot season accentuated the indifference of the trading. There were rumors current all day that the covering by the bears Wednesday had been achieved at considerable cost, and more or less uneasiness was caused by this fact. The emphatic denials from official sources of a number of the rumors which have played a part in the recent bull movement, especially those bearing on consolidations and absorptions of many of the minor railroad systems, was a somewhat depressing factor. An influence in the same direction was the disclaimer, on the part of parties interested, of the assumption that the entrance to the Atchison directory of a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. was an indication of Morgan holdings of the stock with a view of establishment of community of interest. The net changes in stocks give no adequate idea of the extent of the day's price ranges. There was a considerable show of strength at the opening, partly due to the influence of London on account of operations by a coterie of Americans now in London. The selling pressure, however, made an end of the advances before the end of the first hour. The feverish tone of Rock Island was a somewhat unsettling influence, owing to fears that a corner may develop in that stock. There were a few points of positive strength, which, however, had only slight influence in offsetting the general reactionary tendency. The various tobacco companies were most prominent and advanced on the incorporation of the new company in New Jersey, which is believed to be for the purpose of taking over and combining an ever present company. American Tobacco rose an extreme 1¾. Continental Tobacca 2¾, the preferred 5⅜ and American Snuff 4¾. Louisville and Nashville was consistenly strong on the ground of its comparative low price and large earnings and advanced 2⅛. Missouri Pacific rose at one time 2¼, believed to be on account of progress in the greater Missouri Pacific project. In the drop, after the opening, the grangers, Pacifics, Southwesterns and New York public utilities suffered most severely, St. Paul losing 4, the preferred 4½ and others in the group from 2 to 3 points, Declines of one to two points were fairly general in the active list. There was a good rally, but prices ran off again at the weak closing, almost to the lowest in some cases.

SOLDIERS FOUGHT HIM

Tried to Rob Paymaster Arthur's Strong Box, In the Phillipines.

OFFICER DIED IN CLEVELAND.

Believed He Succumbed as Result of a Wound, Received During the Struggle—Had Typhoid Malaria After the Incident.

Cleveland, June 7.—Major George Arthur, assistant paymaster in the United States army and son of P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Eengineers, was stricken with death while sitting in a chair in the lobby of the Weddell house.

An autopsy developed the fact that death had resulted from a ruptured blood vessel on the left side of the head. A large blood clot was formed just behind the ear. It is believed that Major Arthur, while defending the government treasure box in a fight with drunken soldiers last fall in the Philippines, received a blow on the head that ruptured the blood vessel and eventually led to his death.

After his injury he was stricken with typhoid malaria fever, which reduced his weight from 170 to 130 pounds. When he arrived home a month ago he had not recovered his health. He was still weak and often complained of a pain in his chest. Major Arthur was 43 years of age.

PEOPLE'S CHURCH OF AMERICA.

Incorporated to Further Expand Present Organization.

Chicago, June 7.—Articles of incorporation for the People's Church of America were granted at Springfield, this action being taken to extend the scope of the People's Church of Chicago into a national organization. The Chicago church, under the direction of Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas, will be the parent body, and will have limited jurisdiction over congregations at other points.

The first new branches are proposed for Duluth, Minn., and for the Black Hills region in South Dakota. Branches already exist in Milwaukee and elsewhere.

AFTER A NEGRO FIEND.

Farmers Hunt Man Who Carried Girl Into Woods.

St. Joseph, Mo., June 7.—Two hundred infuriated farmers were scouring the timber 20 miles northeast of this city in an effort to capture an unknown negro, who waylaid the 14-year-old daughter of George Dixon, a farmer, bound and gagged her and carried her into the woods. Other school children spread the alarm and farmers were soon in pursuit. The negro became alarmed and fled.

Townley Sentenced to Dismissal.

Washington, June 7.—News has been received here through unofficial channels that Lieutenant Richard H. Townley, of the navy, has been convicted by court martial at Manila and sentenced to dismissal from the service. The charge on which Lieutenant Townley was court martialed was in connection with the recent commissary irregularities at Manila. The sentence must be approved by the president to become effective.

Girl Accidentally Kills Lover.

Fair Haven, O., June 7.—Curtis Roberts, superintendent of schools, of Fair Haven, was accidentally killed while at target practice. With his sweetheart, Mary Alferton, and a party of young people, Roberts had gone into the woods to practice with a target revolver. Miss Alferton fired the first shot, and the ball, striking the side of a stump, bounded off and struck Roberts in the side, inflicting a wound from which he died in a few hours.

WILL THEY BE RUSHED?

New Traction Ordinances Were Asserted Under Preparation In Pittsburg Councils.

Pittsburg, June 7.—Ordinances are being prepared for introduction in councils Monday providing for the granting of the street franchises needed by the new company or companies which are preparing to secure the benefits in Pittsburg of the Focht and Emery bills just passed by the general assembly. Those interested in the new projects for Pittsburg are averse to making public their plans or the names of all the streets over which they expect to run lines until they secure their charters at Harrisburg today.

Enough has been revealed to indicate that there are many millions ready for investment in the new overhead and underground lines planned to be operated with present and to-be-built surface lines. While Thomas S. Bigelow, J. N. Pew, Henry W. and George T. Oliver, R. R. Quay and W. L. Mellon are generally credited with being those most interested in the new enterprise so far as Pitsburg is concerned, they also have associated with them other men who have been in the past prominent in traction affairs, and who, like those mentioned, consider one of the first requisites for success in their project to be the prevention of possible rivals from acquiring full knowledge of their plans.

It was stated yesterday that the hearty support of the city administration and those powerful in councils has been secured for the proposed ordinances, and that more than that required by compliance with the ordinary rules of procedure will be experienced in securing the needed municipal legislation.

PRESIDENT HOPEFUL.

RIXEY LAST NIGHT WOULDN'T SAY MRS. M'KINLEY GAINED.

The Sick Lady Rested Better Yesterday and Was Resting Fairly Last Night.

Washington, June 7.—Dr. Rixey left the white house about 10 o'clock last night, after an hour and a half spent in attendance on Mrs. McKinley. He said: "There is no material change in Mrs. McKinley's condition. She remainst the same as mentioned in our bulletin of this morning."

In answer to specific inquiries, he replied that he could not say there had been any perceptible improvement whatever during the day.

The president last night continued hopeful of the outcome. More than this cannot be said. There had been no setback during the day, but likewise no gain. One favorable circumstance is that Mrs. McKinley continued to gain more sleep than she was able to get in the earlier stages of her illness, and last night was resting fairly comfortably.

The president yesterday, through Secretary Cortelyou, formally notified the Buffalo exposition management that he would not be able to attend the exposition on the 13th inst., as had been planned, but added that he hoped to be able to do so at some later date that may be designated.

Drs. Rixey, Sternberg and Johnston were in consultation at the white house Thursday morning. After their departure Secretary Cortelyou gave out the following statement:

"Mrs. McKinley's physicians report that she has passed a comfortable night and continues to show slight improvement."

Mrs. McKinley arose refreshed Thursday and was brighter than usual during her present illness. Her physicians were allowing her a little coffee and beef tea in addition to the diet of white of eggs and spirits, upon which she had been kept heretofore.

WILL IGNORE THE INTERVIEW.

State Department So Decides as to Castro's Attack on Loomis.

Washington, June 7.—The state department decided that the alleged interview with President Castro, of Venezuela, in which he was made to make grave insinuations against Minister Francis B. Loomis, would be ignored by the United States government.

The first impulse of Secretary Hay was to call upon Castro for information as to the accuracy of his reported utterances and if he did not deny them to recall our charge d'affaires, Mr. Russell. Upon reflection, however, this plan was not believed to be wise, for the reason that American interests in Venezuela would be left at the mercy of the elements in that country hostile to them.

Therefore, an incident which in the case of a larger nation might not have been closed without a war, is prevented from becoming serious simply by being ignored by this government.

THIRTY-SEVEN BOERS KILLED.

Pretoria, June 7.—Colonel Wilson, with about 240 of Kitchener's scouts, surprised and routed about 400 Boers belonging to Beyer's command, about 34 miles west of Warm Baths. The Boers resisted stubbornly, but finally broke and fled, leaving 37 dead, a hundred prisoners and all their wagons and supplies, including about 8,000 cattle, in the hands of the British. The loss of the British was three men killed and 15 wounded.

Beyer's main command arrived on the scene soon after the engagement, but failed in an attempt to recapture the supplies. Beyer was thus left practically without any transport or supplies.

Actor Attempted Suicide.

Cleveland, June 7.—Horace Pell, a member of the stock company which is playing at the Euclid avenue opera house, attempted suicide by shooting himself in the right side. Very little home is entertained for his recovery.

A PERSEVERING MONKEY.

Professor Garner's Story of Nellie and the Matchbox.

Monkeys are always happy if they have plenty to eat and something to play with. Professor R. L. Garner, in his "Apes and Monkeys," says that he recalls no investment which ever yielded a greater return in pleasure than a certain little pocket match safe, which cost 25 cents. He gave it to a little monkey, Nellie by name, after putting into it a small key to make it rattle and some bits of candy.

She rattled the box and found much pleasure in the noise. I showed her how to press the spring in order to open the box, but her little black fingers were not strong enough to release the spring.

However, she caught the idea and knew that the spring was the secret which held the box closed. When she found that she could not open it with her fingers, she tried it with her teeth. Failing in this, she turned to the wall, and, standing upright on the top of her cage, she took the box in both hands and struck the spring against the wall until the lid flew open.

She was perfectly delighted at the result, and for the hundredth time at least I closed the box for her to open it again.

The next time Nellie received the match safe she was in her cage, and through its meshes she could not reach the wall. She had nothing against which to strike the spring to force it open.

After looking around and striking the box several times against the wires of the cage, she discovered a block of wood about six inches square. She took this and mounted her perch. Balancing the block on the perch, she held it with the left foot, while with the right foot she clung to the perch. With her tail wound around the meshes of the cage to steady herself, she carefully adjusted the matchbox in such a manner as to protect her fingers from the blow. Then she struck the spring against the block of wood, and the lid flew open.

She fairly screamed with delight as she held up the box.

A Story Told of Abel Erasmus, the Boer, and Lord Wolseley.

A good story is told of the old Boer, Abel Erasmus, and Lord Wolseley, then Sir Garnet Wolseley, in connection with the part Erasmus took in Wolseley's campaign in 1879 against Sekukuni, the chief of the Bapedis, on the borders of Swaziland. After the capture of Sekukuni he was immediately brought before Sir Garnet Wolseley, who asked him how he, a miserable Kaffir, living in a cave, dared to defy the great queen of England. The chief replied that he had been instigated to do so by Abel Erasmus.

Sir Garnet in describing the scene at a public dinner given to him at Pretoria on his return from the campaign said that he wished there and then to let Abel Erasmus know that if ever he found that Erasmus had been inciting any chief to levy war against England and he was able to lay hands on him Abel Erasmus would hang as high as Haman.

A few days after the dinner Sir Henry Brackenbury, Sir Garnet's military secretary, was sitting in his office when a tall, bearded Boer entered and asked permission to speak with him.

"I am Abel Erasmus," he said, "and I have very important business to do here."

He explained that he had come to see Sir Garnet Wolseley, for he had heard that Sir Garnet had said that if he could lay hold of him he would hang him, and so he had come to be hanged. Sir Garnet was in the next room, and Sir Henry Brackenbury thought it would be advisable to consult him on the subject. Sir Garnet, however, happened to be too busy at the moment to see anybody, and Sir Henry after reflection persuaded his angry visitor to take his leave and allow the hanging to stand over for the time.

An Aldermanic Bull.

Some time ago a follower of one of the city aldermen cast covetous glances upon a desirable newsstand under the elevated railroad stairs. Straight he went to his friend, the alderman, and made known his wishes, which were that the news dealer should be evicted from the locality.

"All right, me boy; leave it to me," said the city father and began to pull wires. Finally he got an order directing the newsdealer to show cause why he should not get out, but that obstinate individual still remained. Then he drew up a formal complaint, which was duly laid before one of the judges. The complaint, after telling how the newsdealer had been ordered to leave and had not done so, concludes:

"And now we have to complain, your honor, that not only is this same stand still there, but the defendant has replaced it by a bigger one."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Found the House.

The late Sir Frederick Gore-Ouseley, professor of music at Oxford, was once going to call on a friend in London and asked a fellow musician the number in which he lived in a certain street.

"I don't know his number," answered the other, "but the note of his door scraper is C sharp."

Sir Frederick went off, contentedly kicking the door scrapers all down the street until he came to the right one, when he rang the bell and went in.—London Standard.

CHAPTER I.

A TRYING SITUATION.

I looked at the prisoner, and I was vexed by doubt. With a battle on one side of him and a woman on the other what is a man to do? She returned my gaze with great, pure eyes, which seemed to say I was a villain, a monster, yet I had been doing my exact duty, that of a faithful soldier in the cause of the Continental congress and freedom, while she, a woman, a girl, had presumed to turn from the things for which God had intended her and to meddle with war. I was more than vexed—I was angry, angry at her for attempting such a task and angry at myself for being forced into a situation so full of troubles.

On the right, in the fringe of woods a quarter of a mile away, the last rifle shot had been fired, and its echo was speeding across the far hills. The powder flashed no more, and the smoke rose in lazy coils over the ground on which men had fought and some had died. The victors, the captured detail with them, were riding away. I almost fancied I could hear the beat of their horses' hoofs, and the dead, I knew, lay with their faces upturned to the sun, waiting there until the last trump called to them to rise again. And here was I, an atom, left in the drift of the armies, cut off from my comrades and alone with this girl.

The horses shifted about uneasily, stamped their feet, and once mine raised his head and neighed, as if in truth he heard the beating hoofs of the galloping detachment. He knew that his comrades, too, were leaving him, though I cannot say that it was a desertion intended by either horse or man.

The girl's look of reproach turned to one of inquiry. She sat on a log, her little riding whip hanging idly in her hand. For the first time I took note of her face—the delicate but firm molding of each feature; the clear depths of her dark, blue eyes; the bronze gold of her hair, clustering in tiny curls around her forehead; the rose red of her cheeks, like a flush; her lithe, strong, young figure. Why is it that when God wishes to make women especially wicked and troublesome he makes them beautiful?

"Well, you rebel," she said, "when do you purpose to set me free?"

"When you give your word of honor that you will tell Cornwallis nothing about the strength of Morgan's forces and our present movements."

"That I will not do."

"Then you remain my prisoner."

Yet I would have been a fool even to have taken her word of honor. What woman has any regard for the truth in military matters? If she could find a chance, she would certainly give information that would bring Cornwallis, as well as Tarleton, on Morgan.

"I think that it is enough for Englishmen themselves to fight us without sending their daughters also against us," I said.

"My father did not send me," she said quickly. "I came of my own accord."

"So much the worse," I replied.

But nothing was to be gained by standing there and talking. Besides, it is never well for a soldier to dispute with his prisoner. It argues an insufficiency for his position. A captor should bear himself with dignity and reserve. I would show my quality.

I untied the horses and led them to the log on which she was sitting.

"Get up!" I said curtly and in a tone of command.

The natural rose flush of her cheeks deepened a little.

"You speak as if you were my master," she said.

"That is just what I am—for the present," I replied. "Mount your horse at once."

She gave me a sidewise look from eyes that flashed, but she stood upon the log.

"This log is too low, and the saddle is too high," she said.

I stepped forward and held out my hand to assist her.

"Don't touch me, you rebel!" she cried and leaped lightly into the saddle.

I felt hurt.

"I wish you wouldn't call me a rebel," I said.

"Why?"

"It's impolite."

"But it's true."

"Well, perhaps it is in a way, and in a way, too, I am proud of it. Are you proud of your king?"

"Yes."

"It doesn't take much to arouse English pride."

"You will think more of him when the war is over. It will pay you to do so."

"Meanwhile we will wait until then."

"What do you purpose to do with me—keep me a prisoner?"

"It is my misfortune."

"The courtesy of a rebel."

"I shall take you to General Morgan."

"Then Tarleton will rescue me. Your Morgan cannot stand before him."

I was afraid that she spoke the truth. We were outnumbered, and besides more than half our force was raw militia. The odds were great against us, and knowing it I did not reply to her taunt.

While we were talking she sat in the saddle with the easy seat of a good horsewoman. I held my horse loosely by the bridle. She was twiddling the whip in her hands. Suddenly she leaned over and lashed my horse across the eyes with her whip. The blow was given with all her might, and the startled horse reared, jerked the bridle out of my hand and ran away.

"Goodby, Mr. Rebel!" she shouted, and drawing her whip across her own horse galloped off in the opposite direction.

I believe I swore. I was angry and alarmed, too, for this girl, with her messages and accurate news about us, was a formidable enemy, escaped, and might cause the destruction of the entire army of the south and the loss of all the southern colonies. I drew a pistol, it being my idea to kill the horse, but it was a shot that I could not risk. I thrust the pistol back in my pocket and ran after my horse. He was 30 or 40 yards away, half mad with rage and pain, his bridle swinging beside him.

I am a very good runner, but I do not claim to be as swift as a horse. Nevertheless I made speed as I ran after him, and I whistled and shouted with a vigor that must have convinced him of my intentions. I looked back once, and the girl and the horse she rode were growing smaller as they sped over the desolate and unfenced fields. My need of a horse, too, was growing more pressing. Mounted, there was hope; afoot, there was none.

I whistled all the calls that a friendly and well treated horse should know and meantime did not neglect to run after him with the best speed that I could command. Presently he seemed to understand and to remember that I was not responsible for the blow. He slackened his pace, looked back over his shoulder at me and whinnied. I whistled encouragingly, he whinnied again, and, remembering who I was, his best friend, came to a full stop, for he was a most intelligent horse. In a half a minute I overtook him, leaped into the saddle and turned his head the other way.

"Now, old horse," I cried, "you can gallop, but you gallop my way."

I wore my spurs, and I gave him a touch of the steel. That was enough, for he was always ambitious and proud of his speed, and away we flew over the fields after the disappearing girl. She was a full quarter of a mile away, and her figure was growing dim on the horizon. Another quarter of a mile and she would be in the woods, where the concealment of the trees would enable her to elude my pursuit. Moreover, these English girls are often daring horsewomen, and even at the distance I could see that she rode like a trooper. But I knew the country, and she did not, and I hoped to secure from it some chance that would enable me to overtake her.

I encouraged my horse. I did more than encourage—I appealed to his pride and his sense of gratitude. I reminded him how I had ridden him all the way from the Hudson when I came south with Greene; how I had tended him and cared for him and fed him, often when I was compelled to go hungry myself. I appealed to him now not to let that girl escape when so much depended on her capture, when I would be eternally disgraced, and he with me, if we permitted ourselves to be tricked and outwitted at such a time by one red cheeked English girl.

He was a sensible horse, and he understood. He said nothing, not even a little snort, but his stride lengthened, and the swift and regular beat of his hoofs on the turf was music.

"Good horse, Old Put, good lad!" I said. I had named him Put after Old Put, the famous old Connecticut general, because he was so reliable and steady. He shook his ears slightly as a sign that he would do his best for me, having no time to say more, and he ran a little faster. I kept a sharp watch for stones and holes in the ground, having no mind to risk a fall which might ruin all, and nursed my comrade's strength, for on land as well as sea a stern chase is a long one.

The figure of the girl and the horse she rode was growing larger, good proof that I was gaining, which was not enough, however, for I might continue to gain, and yet she could elude me in the woods unless I was close upon her when she reached them. Her long hair had fallen down and was streaming behind her like a ribbon of spray with the sunshine on it, but I felt like giving that yellow hair a jerk just then could I have put my hands upon it.

"Steady, Put!" I said to my faithful comrade. "Do you see that girl with the yellow hair? Yes? Well, note the horse that she is riding, a common troop horse, clumsy, ill bred, no pedigree. Are you going to let yourself be beaten by him?"

His ears wagged violently, and he ran a foot to the second faster. We struck a piece of beautiful turf, evidently an old field left to itself until it could recover its fertility, and with the soft grass deadening and easing his footfalls Old Put raced for life. I could almost count the yards that we gained, and still she was not in the forest. She had not looked back until then, and it was a hasty glance, followed by a quick lashing of her mount. I judged that she, too, had noticed the gain and would now be unmerciful to her horse. I was exultant, willing to boast of it, and I shared my feelings with Old Put.

"Notice that yellow haired girl again, Put," I said. "When we catch her this time, we will take care that she does not serve us such a trick again. If we cannot trust an Englishman, Put, how on earth can we put any faith in an English woman?"

Put had received a slight slash once from the saber of an Englishman who had offered to surrender to me and then tried to back out of it, and he knew what I meant. For the first time he uttered a slight snort, called one new muscle into play, and we steadily shortened the distance between us and the girl.

She would have got into the wood a few moments later, but she abruptly reined in her horse, turned him half about and galloped off to the left. I guessed the trouble at once. The heavy rains often wash great gullies in our South Carolina soil, and a kind providence, wishing to oblige me, had placed one of these in her way. It was equal to a gain of 200 feet without an effort, and I turned Old Put at once into the course she was taking.

"Don't you see, Put," I said, "that the Lord is on our side and she and that burnt brown cob of hers that has passed most of his life hitched to a sutler's wagon will be delivered into our hands?"

Old Put fairly neighed, his first real expression of triumph. He was as sure of the victory now as I was, and I had confidence in the judgment of my old comrade.

"Stop, stop!" I shouted to the girl. "If you don't stop, I'll shoot!"

I had a long barreled horse pistol, which I had drawn and was flourishing magnificently. I was within hearing though not shooting range, and I trusted that I would be able to frighten her into yielding.

But she did not stop. She had worn her whip into shreds, and thin red streams of blood zigzagged across the horse's sides, but she pounded on with the stump. I felt a genuine pity for her horse, hack though he was, but none for her.

CHAPTER II.

KEEPING A PRISONER.

No more gullies thrust themselves across the way, and she was within 20 feet of the wood. She took another hurried look at me, and seeing my rapid gain alarm appeared on her face. She drew a little toy pistol from the cloak she wore and leveled it at me, or at least that seemed to be her intention. I call it a toy pistol, because I, a full grown soldier, would have felt deep shame had I been caught with such a weapon in my possession. She pulled the trigger, and the bullet cut the uncomplaining air somewhere, but not in my neighborhood. This bombardment cost her at least 20 feet of gain, but she thrust the terrible weapon back in her cloak and galloped on, with Old Put thundering at her heels. Then she was into the wood, and I was not far behind, shouting to her to stop; that I would surely overtake her and she was merely wasting the breath of both our horses and our own. Still she paid no heed, guiding her horse between the trees and through the bushes with considerable skill.

But, seeing the wood thicken presently, I was tempted to laugh. It was obvious now that the end of the race had come and I was the winner. The wood became so dense, the bushes clustering in thickets and the vines interlacing from tree to tree, that it formed an impenetrable wall. What I had feared would help her had been my best ally.

She stopped short and sat stiffly on her horse, her back turned to me. I wondered if she would draw out that amazing pistol again and threaten me with it, but she made no such attempt, evidently having arrived at wisdom at last. She dropped the stump of her switch on the ground and kept the back of her head toward me. Some beams of sunshine came through the tall trees and gleamed across the long curls of tawny gold, tingeing them for the moment as if with fire.

I rode up by her side, and then, as she seemed to reprove me, I asked Old Put to take me around in front of her. There I could see her face. It was pale, sad and reproachful, and a tear ran down either cheek. For the moment I felt a little pity for her despite her perverse nature and all the trouble she had given me.

"I am sorry I have to do this," I said.

"Sorry for what?" she asked.

I saw that I had made a mistake. One should always be polite to a woman, but never apologetic.

"That I had to overtake you," I said.

"Yours is the better horse," she said, wiping away the tears with an angry little brush of the hand. "I like to ride, and I always enjoy a good race. That was the reason I challenged you to it, though I did not know you had such a good horse."

This was a new view of the case, but I had a thought, or, rather, a reflection.

"It was a good race," I said, "but wasn't that a false start?"

"How so?"

"Didn't you take an advantage?"

"I was entitled to it. I am a woman."

"So women expect to carry that rule even into warfare?"

"Certainly."

I was glad that I had never been forced to wage war with a woman before and hoped never to meet the necessity again. One likes to stick to the rules in military matters, and then he has some idea what to expect.

"The horses are very tired," I said.

"They look like it," said she.

The poor animals were panting, and their coats were damp. I took the reins of her horse from her hand and held them firmly in mine.

"What are you going to do?" she asked.

"I think I'd better hold the reins of both," I said. "Will you please dismount?"

I set her a good example by jumping down myself. She could not say that the prisoner was compelled to walk while the captor rode. I stepped forward to assist her, but again she refused my help and sprang to the ground unassisted.

Old Put gazed angrily at the girl who had struck him. Then he snorted with triumph and looked contemptuously at the horse at his side. The latter seemed to be ashamed of himself, and his attitude was apologetic, but he had done his best and therefore should not have been blamed.

"Come," I said, "we will get out of this wood and walk back across the fields. Walk by my side. I will watch you, as I do not want any more treachery."

I spoke with great sternness, as the mite of pity I felt when I saw the tears had gone. She obeyed with surprising meekness and walked beside me, while I led the horses, holding both bridles in one hand. I was glad that I had been so sharp with her, and I saw now it was the proper way with rebellious women. A man has only to show toward them a stern, unyielding temper, and they submit at once. She was crushed, and again that mite of pity rose up in my breast, for nearly always we feel a trace of sympathy for those whom we have vanquished.

Her head drooped, there was a faint appeal in her eyes, and her walk showed weariness. She seemed to have forgotten that her hair was loose down her back, for she let it hang in long curls of gold, burnished where the sunshine fell upon it, dark in the shadow.

The yellow of the sun was deepening into red, a sign that the afternoon was waning, and I was anxious about the future, for which, like a good soldier, I felt it my duty to provide. She must have seen the care in my face, for she asked:

"Are you thinking how we shall reach General Morgan?"

"General Morgan or some one else."

"Is it far to his camp?"

"I cannot say. I do not know where he is. The American camp just now is of a shifting character."

"To keep out of Tarleton's way, I suppose?"

"Either that or to find him."

Then she seemed to repent of her gibe at our running away from the British.

"But General Morgan is a brave man, I have heard," she said.

That warmed my heart.

"He is a brave man," I said, "and, what is more, he is a fine soldier and general."

"What a pity he is not on the right side!"

"Let's not quarrel about that again."

I thought I could afford to be generous. My situation was so superior to hers.

After that we walked along in silence for several minutes. The red tint of the sun deepened; faint shadows appeared in the blue velvet of the sky.

"I want to ask you one question," she said presently.

"There is nothing to prevent your asking it."

"But I want an answer, direct and correct."

"If it does not interfere with the progress of the campaign."

"I don't think it will do that."

"What is it?"

"What is your name?"

I laughed. It had never occurred to me before to tell her.

QUEER DOINGS OF COLLEGE SOCIETIES

These are busy days in the college world. What with his examinations, the annual commencement, the conferring of degrees, the leaving of his alma mater and the summer vacation to look forward to the college man finds his time very well occupied. None of these things, however, is of quite as much importance as the festivities of his

Greek letter society, provided of course that he is fortunate enough to belong to one.

All sorts of jubilee and various kinds of mischief are in order just now in college towns, for the college fraternities seldom miss an opportunity to let the rest of the community know of their existence. The break up of the college year is, of course, a good time to celebrate.

This is the time of year at most colleges when undergraduates are honored by election to the fraternities. Some of these admit members from all classes, while the membership of others is restricted to men in the various years. At the larger universities, notably at Harvard and Yale, membership in the senior "frats" is an honor eagerly desired by the juniors, and it is an anxious waiting time for the members of the second class. The number of members in the senior societies is in most cases very limited, and the man who is elected must be indeed prominent and popular in college life.

Some of the customs connected with the election to a senior society are very curious and date back to a remote period in American history. At Yale, for example, the active members of the three senior fraternities, Skull and Bones, Scroll and Key and Wolf's Head, signify the election of their successors by slapping them on the shoulder. On the last Thursday in May at Yale a great crowd of students gathers on the campus. The juniors stand in a big group, each man hoping that he will be one of the chosen. In a few minutes one of the seniors is seen walking across the campus. With grim and solemn visage he advances until he reaches one of the men in the group of juniors. The senior lifts his hand and lets it fall with a heavy slap on the shoulder of the man selected without saying a word. So it goes until each of the three great senior organizations has selected its full quota of members for the ensuing year.

At the other colleges also quaint and curious ceremonies of election to the Greek letter and other fraternities take place. They are all according to tradition, for in such matters the college student is the most conservative of men. Even in the younger and smaller colleges, where the societies are things of recent growth, it is all done very formally and solemnly. To an outsider it sometimes seems very childish, but to the college man the ceremonies are always matters of interest.

To noncollegians the Greek letter fraternities, with their pins, badges and passwords, initiations and other secret observances, seem hedged about with a great deal of infantile mystery. In giving this impression they are exactly fulfilling the purpose of their members. In reality there is nothing very secret about most of them, for their chief end in most cases is to serve as social organizations. The division of the Greek letter society that exists in any college is called a "chapter." Very many of the "chapters," notably in the larger institutions of learning, now have their own homes in beautiful buildings. These serve as clubhouses for the members, and they answer the purpose admirably. Some of them indeed are fitted up as homes for the members.

The Greek letter fraternity is an institution peculiar to the American college. The only thing in foreign countries that resembles it is the "corps" at the German university, and even this presents as many points of diversity as of resemblance. The Greek letter fraternity takes its name from the Greek letters by which it is known and which have occult meanings known only to the initiated. Among the most prominent and popular fraternities are Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta, Beta Theta Pi and Psi Upsilon. The first Greek letter fraternity of any kind was founded at the College of William and Mary, Virginia, in 1776. It was not until the third or fourth decade of the past century, however, that they really took root in the colleges, but since then their growth has been rapid.

The fraternity serves the double purpose of uniting the men while attending the college or university and after they have left their alma mater. In New York some of the larger fraternities have erected beautiful houses, and the reunions of the members serve to recall the most delightful memories of college years.

Greek fraternity members are divided into two classes. While at college they are called active members. After graduation they are known as alumni.

DELTA KAPPA EPSILON HOUSE, CORNELL.

Some few fraternities also have what are known as honorary members. According to the latest obtainable figures, there are 29 fraternities, with 781 active and 369 inactive chapters. These have 130,980 members.

Women college students have their Greek letter fraternities also. There are seven of these, with 122 active chapters and 39 inactive, with 11,708 members. The women's societies are for the most part modeled after those of the male students. Besides these general fraternities there are in a number of colleges what are known as local fraternities which have no membership at other institutions.

Although the initiations in some of these societies are conducted with a great deal of tomfoolery and in a very few instances serious injury or even death has resulted to the candidate, when a man is once in he has plain sailing. College life is made decidedly more attractive by membership in the Greek letter and other societies. They foster the spirit of friendship and above all loyalty to one's alma mater.

Besides the pins of their "frats" most Greek letter men wear as a distinguishing sign upon their watch chains a flat watch key upon which are engraved the mystic Greek letters. The sight of the watch key serves as a passport from one Greek letter man to another wherever they meet and is indeed a bond of union all through life. At the reunions of the men of a "frat," especially in larger cities, it is no uncommon sight to see gray headed men hobnobbing joyfully with the graduates just fresh from academic halls. "The tie that binds" is the potent spell of membership in one of the great fraternities.

INTERNATIONAL SHOOTING.

American Trap Experts Compete Near London June 11—The Team.

The team of American trap shooters now in England will compete in its first match June 11. The marksmen compete on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun club, near London, for a stake of $2,500 a side. Five thousand inanimate targets will be shot at by each of the contesting organizations.

A few days prior to the team's date of sailing for England W. R. Crosby of O'Fallon, Ills., one of the members, broke two world's trap shooting records. In the shoot off for the Dupont trophy at Springfield, Ills., Crosby killed 110 live birds straight. Shortly afterward he increased this sensational number to 145.

Tom A. Marshall, mayor of Keithsburg, Ills., captain of the team, is

The Finger Posts Marking the Many By-Paths of Present Day Troubles. All Seem to Point the Same —Lack of Nerve Force.

Day by day the columns of this paper bring new evidences from East Liverpool people of the great work being done by Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills. Why they accomplish so much is easily explained. They are prepared with an eye single to restoring nerve forces. They accomplish this object which no other medicine in the world has ever been able to do. That's why hundreds of East Liverpool people offer their testimony.

Mr. Cyrus Hanselman, of 279 Sugar street, East Liverpool, Ohio, says: "Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are a fine medicine. It has done for me more to cure my old rheumatism than anything I ever took. The rheumatism had hung on for four or five years, and was all in the legs and shoulders. I could not sleep and at times could not move with the pain. I was told of the Nerve Pills and got them at Larkins' drug store, corner Sixth and East Market streets, and they took hold firmly, something nothing else ever did. The pain and stiffness is about gone. I am feeling strong and get about and sleep well. It won't take many more to cure me completely."

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50 cents a box at dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., are on every package.

Howells' Advice to Writers.

One day at Lakewood while sitting at a little table in the big rotunda hall drinking afternoon tea I met Mr. W. D. Howells and had a delightful conversation with him. After knowing the personality of this famous author one enjoys his writing ten times more—he is so magnetic and his conversation so interesting and breezy. "Yes," he said, "I always advise any one who has an inclination for it to try to write. One shouldn't expect to have the first things one does published, but one must keep on trying. It is an excellent plan to set down something one has seen in everyday life and try to get a story out of it. Indeed, it's the best way to practice.

"Writing is mostly drudgery," he continued. "I have to force myself to go into my library to work, and I find myself putting off the hour as long as possible."

"But when you once sit down?" I ventured.

"Even then it's hard work for awhile until I get into the swing. Let no one imagine the muse comes without a summons and without a good deal of urging! At least she never does to me!"—Anna Wentworth in Woman's Home Companion.

BIGELOW IS ON TOP.

Pittsburger Restored to Position He Formerly Held.

HE WAS REMOVED MONTHS AGO.

Councils Acted on Unproved Allegation That He Was Some Way Responsible For Late Paisley's Wrongdoing—Animus Asserted Back of It.

Pittsburg, June 7.—Edward Bigelow was yesterday restored to his former position as director of the department of public works by City Recorder A. M. Brown; after the latter had requested, received and accepted the resignation of George W. Wilson. Mr. Bigelow, who appeared beaming with satisfaction over the outcome, verbally announced his acceptance of the appointment, saying that he could not tell when he would assume the active management of the affairs of the office until he had seen and talked with Recorder Brown. He has tendered his thanks to the recorder and was to have a talk with him this morning. Mr. Wilson's resignation takes effect immediately, but he will remain in active direction of the office until his successor is ready to go in.

This is the first exercise by Recorder Brown of the power of removal of department heads conferred upon him by the new charter.

Almost a year ago Bigelow was removed by vote of councils, it being asserted previously he was in some way responsible for the peculations of the late Samuel Paisley, chief of the department of highways and sewers. In reality, it was supposed councils acted through dictation of certain personal or political animus.

UNDER WAR SECRETARY.

Both General and Governor to Officiate In Philippines.

Washington, June 7.—The new civil government to be established in the Philippines is receiving the consideration of the president and the secretary of war. It will differ very little from what was first intended, as there will be a governor for the archipelago and a legislative council and other officers. This government will have control of all civil affairs, but it will be under the war power to the extent of being directed by the secretary of war. There will be a nice distinction as to the authority of the general commanding the troops in the Philippines and the governor to be appointed under the civil government. No official declaration has been made as to who will be the supreme authority, but it is known that the secretary of war will be supreme. While it is not the intention to conduct the government of the Philippines under the Spooner law, that law will be taken as sanctioning what is to be done. The new government will be similar to that which existed for a short time in the early days of New Mexico. There was a civil governor appointed by the president and a commanding general of the army. Both had their functions in preserving the peace and controlling the affairs of the territory.

TAYLOR OPPOSES TRUSTS.

Ohio Congressman Also Thinks Tariff Discussion Would Be Disturbing.

Washington, June 7.—The industrial commission, at its session, considered the tariff question with consequential reference to trusts, the witnesses being Congressman Robert W. Taylor, of Ohio, and Dr. George Gunton, president of the New York Institute of Social Economies. Mr. Taylor took the position that any discussion in congress of the tariff at this time would have a damaging effect upon the country. He said the Dingley law was the most equitable tariff law the United States had ever had. He took a decided position against trusts, and said that they are not fostered by the protective tariff. Mr. Taylor also said that he believed in the principle of reciprocity, but that he did not endorse any of the recently negotiated reciprocity treaties.

Dr. Gunton devoted himself especially to replying to an argument recently made before the commission by Mr. Edward Atkinson for freer trade. Dr. Gunton said that the freedom contended for by opponents of the tariff is analagous to the freedom of the savage, a freedom which is indulged in too freely not only brings injury to others, but ruin to himself.

YOUTH'S AWFUL CRIMES.

Killed His Brother and Sister, Then Committed Suicide.

Toledo, O., June 7.—Leroy Grove, the 16-year-old son of a prosperous farmer living near Napoleon, stabbed his sister, aged 24, to the heart, killing her instantly. He then strangled his 13-year-old brother to death, and, firing the barn, ran in and shot himself through the temple.

The tragedy occurred just after midnight Wednesday night. His charred body was recovered. It is supposed he was made insane by reading novels of the Jesse James stripe.

ORDER TO COL. M'KIBBIN.

Is to Resume Command of His Regiment In Philippines.

Washington, June 7.—By direction of the president, Colonel Chambers McKibbin, Twelfth infantry, has been relieved from command of the department of Texas and ordered to resume command of his regiment in the Philippine islands.

He will be succeeded in command of the department of Texas by Colonel James N. Wheelan, of the Twelfth cavalry. It is understood that the change was made at the request of Colonel McKibbin, who desired service in the Philippines.

SCHLEY'S KIND REPLY.

One of a Mob of Brokers Asked "What's the Matter With Sampson?"

GALLANT OFFICER; GOOD MAN,

He Replied, Also Asserting There Was "Nothing" the Matter With His Rival—Went to Visit Sears at Maritime Exchange.

New York, June 7.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley went to the Maritime Exchange to visit Lieutenant Commander James A. Sears, who was his flag lieutenant at the battle of Santiago and who was recently sent to the hydrographic bureau of the exchange.

The rear admiral was recognized and was asked to meet the members. He consented, and as soon as he appeared the brokers surrounded him, cheered themselves hoarse and asked for a speech. This Admiral Schley declined to do, but said he would be pleased to shake hands with everybody if he were allowed to go. This caused more cheering, and when it subsided someone shouted:

"What's the matter with Sampson?"

The Admiral replied: "Nothing; he is a gallant officer and a good man."

This was greeted with more cheers and the uproar became so great that someone jokingly telephoned to the police station that a riot was in progress in the Maritime Exchange. The police escorted the admiral, who was laughing by this time, to safety, but only after he had shaken hands all around.

CAPITOL BILL AMENDED.

Appropriation Reduced From $5,000,000 to $4,000,000 In Penn'a House.

Harrisburg, June 7.—The Fox capitol bill passed second reading Thursday in the house, after it had been amended to appropriate $4,000,000, instead of $5,000,000, to complete the building. The bill as it passed the senate appropriated $5,000,000 and provided a commission of five, one of whom shall be a Democrat, to be appointed by Governor Stone. The house Democrats are opposed to minority represenation on the commission, and on motion of Mr. Haag, of Schuylkill, the clause providing for the appointment of a Democrat was stricken out.

The senate remained in session only about 20 minutes Thursday, after which adjournment was taken until next Monday night at 9 o'clock.

Among other proceedings, the Muehlbronner bill amending the act governing second class cities, popularly known as the Pittsburg "ripper" law, was passed finally.

A resolution presented by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia, providing that after Tuesday next no new bills shall be introduced in the senate, was adopted.

After the calendar had been cleared of bills on first reading the senate adjourned.

More G. A. R. Officers.

Gettysburg, Pa., June 7.—The G. A. R. state convention elected the following officers, Levi G. McCauley, of West Chester, having been chosen department commander Wednesday: Senior vice commander, A. B. Stevens, Scranton; junior vice commander, John McNevin, Altoona; medical director, Dr. M. B. Hayes, Columbia; chaplain, Rev. John W. Sayres, Philadelphia. Delegates to the national encampment were also chosen.
